A Flying Dialogue Printed for Washington And Rabbits Generally Trouble for Somebody

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

On the European side of the Atlantic ocean airplanes and what they will do to battleships are taken seriously. Lord Rothermere's editorial page in the Daily Mail prints a dialogue between an admiral of the old fashioned floating fleet and an "air commodore."

Extracts from that dialogue should be broadcast for the benefit of Washington, D. C., which still calls the airship "an auxiliary" of the army or navy. Our revolving-chair admirals and generals would have called powder and bullets when first invented "an auxiliary" of the bow and arrow.

This extract from Rothermere's editorial page you might send to your Congressman or somebody higher up:

Admiral: Oh, I know you flying fellows think that any fleet is at your mercy, but what chance have you of hitting a battleship from 15,000 feet up in the air?

Air Commodore: We don't need to. A near miss anywhere within fifty yards would blow her plates in under water, smash her condenser system, and cripple her rudder. Even if she still floated, she would be a helpless hulk. Besides, we should not stay at 15,000 feet. What chance would your flagship have against a squadron of planes diving down on you at 300 miles an hour, each with a load of bombs or torpedoes?

Admiral: My dear fellow, naval experts have studied this question of air attack, and they're quite satisfied we can meet it successfully.

Air Commodore: Indeed? Well, if there's one authority that might be expected to support you it's "Brassey's Naval Annual." Yet in this year's edition I was reading just now that:

"He would be a rash naval commander who would venture at all his most heavily protected and fastest ships into the close proximity of shore-based aircraft."

Mid-Channel and mid-Mediterranean are no more than a few minutes' flight for shore-based aircraft, admiral. Safe though the fleet may be in the open sea, it must return to narrow waters some time.

The stuffy British admiral, like many American army and navy rabbit-minds, has not yet learned what war in the air will mean and imagines that floating warships will be necessary to protect England's merchant ships bringing food supplies. He does not realize that a warship convoy would serve to attract and guide enemy airships and submarines. Rothermere's British flier tells him about that:

Air Commodore: There again, your own authorities are against you. "Brassey" says:

"Merchant ships are almost completely at the mercy of attacking aircraft . . . nor does convoy appear to afford a solution, and it may be a positive disadvantage. In spite of defensive air patrols, look-out ships and ships with efficient armament in company, it is not believed that a convoy could be properly defended."

On the other hand, submarine attacks on convoys would be made much surer by the help of aircraft reconnaissance.

No, admiral, the greatest days of your great service are over. For distant and deep waters, a thousand miles from any air base, I do not deny that battleships may still be of immense importance to our national defense. But the next war will begin in the air, be fought in the air, and be decided in the air. Every pound spent on building ships until we have the strongest air force in the world is money wasted.

Rothermere prints the above for the benefit of Britain's official dodoes and, while it is probably wasted paper and ink to reprint it for the benefit of American dodoes, too fat to fly and too deep in the rut of habit to think for themselves, nevertheless it is reprinted.

One of these days, someone in the United States may be held responsible for horrible loss of life because of aircraft neglect by our government.

Nazis Seize Rebel Synod Typewriters

Berlin, July 22 (AP)—Hans Kerrl, head of the Nazi department of church affairs, took further steps today toward his goal of smashing what he has termed church rebels.

On his orders typewriters and duplicating machines in the Berlin offices of the oppositional synod were seized. The oppositional, or Protestant confessional, synod repeatedly has defied Nazi efforts to reorganize the faith in Germany.

BEGIN PROBES OF INJURY TO PWA MAN

Evidence which may result in four arrests was obtained today during investigation of the nearly-fatal attack on William D. Johnston, 32, a Dorchester Works Progress Administration civil engineer, at a drinking party on the grounds of the State Hospital, Mattapan, July 13.

Two more employes of the institution face dismissal in addition to the three discharged yesterday after a secret probe of the affray.

OUSTED FOR DRINKING

Dr. James V. May, superintendent of the hospital, said that the trio discharged, two attendants and a porter, were dismissed for drinking on the institution grounds on the night of the attack.

They had been drinking with Johnston, he said.

Separate investigations were underway by the hospital authorities on the one hand and, on the other, the police and Dr. William Johnston, of Norfolk street, Dorchester, father of the victim, who called police into the case.

Johnston remained in a critical condition at City Hospital, his major injury a fracture of the spinal column believed to have been suffered when he fell or was thrown from a third floor window of the

Lindys in Berlin To Meet Hitler

Colonel Kastner, commander of the Richthofen air squadron at Staacken airport, greeted the United States flier, on behalf of the air ministry.

Major Truman Smith, military attache of the United States Embassy, and Captain James C. Crockett, assistant military attache, also met the Lindberghs.

It was learned authoritatively a meeting between Lindbergh and both Reichschancellor Adolf Hitler and General Herman Wilhelm Goering had been arranged.

LANGONE HITS DRIVER, FACES WARRANT

Senator Joseph A. Langone, Jr., landed a right hook on or in the vicinity of the jaw of a truck driver in Court street today.

The truck driver retaliated with a visit to the police station where he was advised to go to court and apply for a warrant charging the North End senator with assault and battery, if he believed the situation justified such a course.

He had not appeared at court late this afternoon.

LEAVE MACHINES

The truck driver, according to one of a score of witnesses attracted by the noise, remarked during the course of his argument that Senator Langone possessed a chin he greatly admired.

It was at this point that the pugnacious senator let go his right.

LAUGHS AT WARRANT

Told that a warrant might be asked against him, Senator Langone grinned and said:

The truck driver was described as about 22 years old, 150 pounds.

45,000 See Handicap At Downs

By DAVE EGAN

Suffolk Downs, July 22—Under seamless blue skies and a soft sun, the Massachusetts Handicap, for an added purse of $25,000 was to be run this afternoon, and from all indications, a crowd of more than 40,000 would pack Suffolk Downs.

The track was fast and slick, as gentlemen massaged it gently with tractors and raked it carefully, and there was more than a little chance that the track record for the mile and one eighth, held by Top Row, would be broken into small bits before the sun set on one of th gaudiest sporting days New

3 SAVED AS 2 BOATS CRASH

Three men were saved in a dramatic rescue near the Fish Pier in South Boston today when the Aerolite, a lobster smack, was sunk before the eyes of many fishermen by a large barge.

The men were hurled into the water by the collision. Although dazed, they managed to swim near the barge, from which ropes were tossed to them.

As their craft sank they were hauled aboard the barge and given first aid treatment.

The Aerolite, which has just taken on fuel, made a quick turn and apparently was sent between the barge, owned by Cities Service, and the tug Dauntless which was towing it.

WORK, NOT TAXES, WHITE DEMAND IN MAINE RALLY

1000 CHEER G. O. P. SENATOR IN BAR HARBOR SPEECH

By LUTHER CONANT, JR.
(Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent)

Bar Harbor, Me., July 22—The demand of Senator Wallace White, Jr., Republican nominee for re-election for "an abundant life through productive work rather than by tax paid for work" was roundly cheered here last night in a rally attended by more than 1,000 visitors.

Of political significance was the make-up of the audience, comprising as it did summer visitors from half the state.

Speaking from the platform were Congressman Ralph O. Brewster, Republican nominee from the third district, Secretary of State Lewis O. Barrows, Republican Gubernatorial nominee, and Miss Marion E. Martin, National Committee woman. "Ruinous taxation" the result of the New Deal rally "discriminatory public expenditures at the cost of the State of Maine" was attacked by Senator White, the first speaker.

"Paraphrasing the words of another," he said, "America needs today in her government more facts and less frenzy; more common sense in arithmetic and less alphabetical puzzles; more sense and sanity and less theory.

WORK, NOT TAXES

"It wants the abundant life through productive work rather than by tax paid for work. It wants taxes collected for necessary governmental activities and not for experimentation or punishment of individuals and business.

"It wants our government to be protector of all and not agitator-creating class consciousness, arraying class against class, sowing the seeds of discontent and bitterness, above all it wants more constitution and use of American institution and ideals and less of foreign methods and conceptions."

Business-like and non-partisan conduct of state recreational advertising, was called for by Secretary Barrows. Of Maine's business, he said:

"This is a great business enterprise representating our greatest single industry, with outcome by the state of more than $100,000,000 a year. It should be on strictly business lines.

DRAWS PARALLEL

"Maine's development activities offer constantly expanding opportunities for Maine and its future growth. I would hate even the suggestion that we should curtail our advertising efforts."

He had drawing a parallel between New Deal national and state excessive expenditures and budget deficiencies.

"The experience of the past 10 years in promotional publicity should be carefully studied and the records of results surveyed," Mr. Barrows declared. "The most competent assistance should be received and any suggestion of partisan consideration carefully avoided."

The Republican rally on the village green at Bar Harbor concluded a two-day whirlwind tour of Hancock County.

Speaking on the tariff and its effect on Maine, Congressman Brewster followed Mr. Barrows's statement on the state's recreational business with the comment that Maine had the deepest of interest in the New Deal program of expenditures and resultant taxation and indebtedness.

"In the state of Maine we are doubly dependent upon the prosperity of the nation as a whole. We have a million people visit us every summer, but we want more visitors, and they can't come here unless they find prosperous business conditions in their home states," he said,

HULL AS HERO

During his discussion of the New Deal tariff treaties, Mr. Brewster quoted from a wireless to the New York Times from Stockholm, Sweden.

"The Times says Secretary of State Cordell Hull is a hero and every schoolboy, or so it seems, knows his name. It would is gratifying to have our secretary of state regarded as a hero in Sweden if the suspicion did not seem justified that his high esteem in Sweden has been purchased at the expense or the sacrifice of the interests of the United States and most certainly of the state of Maine.

"The treatment accorded Maine products in the Swedish trade agreement furnishes ample evidence of the prejudice it presents to Maine farmers and the Maine working man."

The Times Dispatch reported the reaction to Sweden's present profitable export business in both that country and Maine are interested in world trade in pulp, matches and granite.

Miss Martin told her hearers of Republican stability and unstable industrial conditions under the New Deal program. She said:

"You women who are mothers, sweethearts and sisters know the story, the story of American youth under the New Deal. You know that the only careers open to the young men under the present national administration's program are the dubious jobs offered within the administrative pools of some alphabetical combinations.

"What future is offered our young men? How do they know how long their jobs will last, how much attention they must pay to the currying of political favor in order to keep on the job? More than anyone else, the coming generation who should be preparing for service as captains of industry of the future, would appreciate a return to stable industrial conditions under a sound Republican administration."

Rallies were also held at Seal Harbor, Northeast Harbor, South West Harbor and McKinley. All were well attended. The group also met party workers at Somesville and Hall Quarry.

Probe Fire

Police were today investigating the fire, believed an incendiary, in a two-and-a-half story office building in Blue Hill avenue, Mattapan, which was saved from spreading seriously by the alertness of an officer.

Maine Seeks To End New Deal Waste

By WILLIAM SMITH

Augusta, Me., July 22—"Government waste—it's got to stop!"

Scores and scores of times, men and women of Maine made this remark, or said something substantially the same, as they cast their votes in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Straw Ballot.

The Straw Ballot reporter gathered that, to them, the words New Deal and Waste were synonymous.

They cast their votes with alacrity for Senator Wallace H. White, Republican candidate for re-election—with alacrity and with great positiveness—these anti-New Deal voters, as if their opposition to Roosevelt policies had crystallized long ago and was unchangeable.

The forcefulness of their attitude is as much a feature of the straw voting as the vote total itself, which shows White leading Governor Louis J. Brann for senator and Lewis O. Barrows, Republican, ahead of Harold Dubord for governor.

HOUSEWIVES VOTE

Businessmen, housewives, unemployed, police and firemen, laborers, mechanics, war veterans, the young and the old, the well-to-do and the less fortunate were interviewed as they voted.

The tour, to date, has looped from Portland through Auburn and Lewiston to Gardiner and Augusta, thence to Bangor and to Forderline Calais, around to Skowhegan and Newport, back almost to Portland again at Norway and Bridgeton, and around through Farmington, Rumford, Bethel, Harrison, South Paris, Chisholm, Livermore Falls and Wilton.

A housewife in Portland, where White showed remarkable strength in a district where Brann should have submerged him, said:

"Common sense tells me the government can't throw away money like it has been doing. Relief is O. K. but it ought to be administered without throwing the money around.

"I have so much to run my house on, and I've got to keep inside of that amount. The government now is spending like a man on a spree and then going after the money and mortgaging the whole future of the country to pay for New Deal waste."

DR. TOWNSEND HERE SUNDAY

The occasion will he a mass meeting of the Townsend clubs of Massachusetts, but others will be welcome, providing they donate 25 cents for reserved seats or 15 cents for general admission.

Roosevelt Heads Toward Yarmouth

Aboard Schooner Liberty, En route to Yarmouth, N. S., July 22 (Sun.)—Favored by a brisk breeze that bellied the sails of the Seawanna out for the first time in several days, President Roosevelt weighed anchor off Cap Sable this morning and headed up the Bay of Fundy for Yarmouth.

A fog bank lying offshore threatened to set in, however. The President hoped to make th Inny coast town today rgardless. It isn 40-mile run from last night's anchorage.

On July 31, the chief executive is due in Quebec for a courtesy call on Lord Tweedsmuir, governor general of Canada. Immediately thereafter, it appeared Mr. Roosevelt plan a whirlwind series of tours that will carry him into virtually all of the politically debatable territory of this year's campaign.

Consideration was being given to a swing down the Connecticut River Valley and into New York state and Pennsylvania through the area which was hit badly by last spring's floods.

A two or three-day stop at the family estate at Hyde Park, N. Y., is then in tentative order. There the President will be able to see various of his key political lieutenants.

The Republican candidates, Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., for Senator, and John W. Haigis, for Governor, topped their Democratic rivals, however, in Winchendon during this eighth day.

Results in the Massachusetts balloting, to date, and with all, except questionable mail ballots included, show:

For United States Senator:
Lodge ..... 3453
Curley ..... 1139
For Governor:
Haigis ..... 3868
Hurley ..... 1108

Thus far, in the more than a week of sounding sentiment among voters of Massachusetts, Athol and Gardner are the only communities which have given the two Democratic candidates an edge, even slight.

WATCH FOR CAR

In all other places, including Boston and other usually strong Democratic sections, the downward thumb has been against the New Deal supporters by the straw balloters.

Athol gave Lodge 65 votes to 134 for Curley and Haigis 67 to 134 for Hurley.

In Gardner, Lodge polled 50 votes, Curley 103, Haigis 55 and Hurley 99, but Winchendon gave Lodge 62, Curley 24, Haigis 64 and Hurley 22.

Today the straw ballot car is in Leominster, Clinton and Fitchburg—so watch for it.

didate for the senate, picked up many votes over his Democratic opponent, Governor Louis J. Brann, and the same went for Lewis C. Barrows, Republican candidate for governor, over F. Harold Dubord, the Democrat.

At the end of the eighth day the straw ballot standing, with mail votes included, is as follows:

For United States Senator:
White ..... 1600
Brann ..... 1346
For Governor:
Barrows ..... 2036
Dubord ..... 1027

During the eighth day's straw balloting, Harrison gave White 7 votes, Brann 3, Barrows 8 and Dubord 2; South Paris went 24 for White, 11 for Brann, 26 for Barrows and 9 for Dubord.

WHITE LEADS

Chisholm gave White 21, Brann 9, Barrows 13 and Dubord 17; Livermore Falls went 44 for White, 21 for Brann, 47 for Barrows and 18 for Dubord, while Wilton results were 42 for White, 23 for Brann, 46 for Barrows and 19 for Dubord.

Today in Maine the straw ballot car is sounding out the sentiment in Dover-Foxcroft, Milo and Guilford.

Car Hits Truck; 3 Men Injured

They are Sidney Dubin of Lowell street, Edward Englander, South Maple street, and Samuel Drellinger of Granite street. Dubin suffered a compound fracture of his left leg, while his two companions were treated for lacerations and abrasions of the head. They were taken to Malden Hospital.

Today's Boon-Doggle

At Thatcher, Col., the Works Progress Administration is spending $11,196 to construct a gymnasium for the use of pupils in the grade and high schools. The population of Thatcher is 142 persons, and the gymnasium will thus represent a federal expenditure amounting to nearly $80 per capita.

Works Progress Administration records here do not show the number of cases on relief in this town, but in the county in which Thatcher is situated, 6¼ per cent of the total population is employed by the Works Progress Administration. If the same percentage of Thatcher's population is so employed, there would be nine persons on the Federal work relief rolls there, and the Federal Treasury would be paying out $1244 for each one of these persons.

Inured and calloused as they are to the boon-doggling activities of their superiors, the Works Progress Administration press representatives appear to have been highly sensitive about this project. Instead of describing it in its true colors, they merely announced it as follows:

HAMILTON SEES LANDON WIN IN NEW ENGLAND

By CHARLES N. WHEELER
(Universal Service)

Chicago, July 22—New England solid for Landon and Knox, New York State by 500,000 and up, and Pennsylvania by an old-time Republican margin.

This was the picture unfolded in Chicago by John Hamilton, Republican national chairman, on his return from the organization and speaking tour in the East.

The two-fisted director of the Republican battle also confirmed his long conference with former Governor Alfred E. Smith in New York city, and said:

"In one form or another Governor Smith will make known to the country his views during the coming campaign. Under what auspices is a matter for him to decide. I think that is as far as I want to go at this time except to say that I was well pleased with the interview."

Pressed for further details of the conference, Hamilton finally said:

"I hope to see Governor Smith again during the campaign, but no arrangements for the meeting have been made as yet."

Hamilton also announced that it would be "safe speculation" to predict that Governor Landon will make a speaking trip through the East start off the campaign. He added:

"While his itinerary is still indefinite, I think it would be a safe guess that he will make several speeches throughout the East. In fact, the Governor very likely will make a great many speeches before the campaign is over."

Hamilton, reviewing his swing through the East, declared that Landon sentiment is sweeping the entire section. In New England this wave has reached large proportions already, he asserted, with present indications that not only will the East go down the line for the national ticket but will elect Republican governors, United States senators and congressmen. He declared:

"New York state is Republican right now. Upstate, the Republicans will have not less than 750,000 majority and will carry the entire state by from 500,000 up."

Maine, he added, could be dismissed from further speculation, explaining:

"While Governor Brann is popular on local issues, his influence is negligible in the present campaign because he is endeavoring to carry Roosevelt with him. Maine is against Roosevelt and will so vote in September."

Veteran political leaders of the state, Hamilton reported, were unanimous in stating that the G. O. P. sentiment is the strongest known in the Pine Tree Commonwealth since the days of James G. Blaine.

He went on:

"I had planned mostly to meet party leaders and help to set up a working organization, but when we got to Bangor the outpouring was a record-breaker."

New Hampshire, he declared, will not only roll up a big majority for Landon and Knox, but will elect the G. O. P. congressional and senatorial candidates, and added:

"The best of feeling prevails all over the state and there can be no question of the result there."

He smiled broadly when he came to Vermont, saying:

"That is the one state that Mr. Farley does not claim, so I guess it is safe for us to put it down as in our column."

Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island are also ablaze with Massachusetts, Connecticut and ing.

"The old Bay State will come through this time in fine shape. There is not the slightest doubt about Massachusetts. The Republicans will have the electoral vote as well as electing the Governor and increasing the congressional delegation."

Although the Farleyites are putting up the biggest fight imaginable in that territory, Pennsylvania, he predicted, will go Republican by an enormous lead.

75,000 TO HEAR LANDON'S SPEECH

THOUSANDS RUSH TO TOPEKA

By ROBERT HUMPHREYS
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Topeka, Kan., July 22—Topeka today stood prepared to play host to the greatest crowd in the history of the Prairie States when Governor Alfred M. Landon is formally notified of his Presidential nomination here tomorrow.

As early contingents began pouring into the Kansas capital, the local committee on arrangements predicted between 50,000 and 75,000 persons will witness the colorful pageantry scheduled to precede the Governor's address of acceptance.

James Breir, chairman of the transportation committee, announced that 40 special trains bearing 12,000 passengers have been definitely scheduled, with railroads now considering requests for another dozen.

Motor caravans from Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska and Oklahoma are expected to carry approximately 10,000 persons, Brier said, adding:

"In addition, there are undoubtedly thousands traveling by air, train and automobile who have not organized and made arrangements with Topeka committees."

Meanwhile, final details of the spectacular parade which will usher in the notification ceremonies were announced.

12,000 TO MARCH

It will be the first three-column parade ever attempted, according to Colonel William A. Biby, who is directing it.

More than 12,000 persons will participate. Eighty-one bands, with a total personnel of 4200 musicians, have places in the line of march. Eighteen drum and bugle corps and six units of chanters and choristers will parade.

Scores of floats, more than 300 Indians, 100 cowboys, elephants, a carriage that Abraham Lincoln once rode in, the famous Deadwood (S. D.), Cheyenne stage coach, 25 prairie schooners and prairie freighters, two miniature full-length railroad trains, 875 horses, a yoke of oxen and 12 units of farm-harvesting machinery, both early and modern, are included in the spectacle.

The parade will take approximately two hours to pass the reviewing stands. Its center column will be devoted to pagentry, flanked on both sides by bands and marching units.

The day's program includes numerous receptions for notables, barbecues and a ritual dance by the tribal Indians. A complete Indian village has been established at the state fair grounds.

INDIAN POW-WOW

Representing 41 tribes from 14 states, the 300 Indians, a majority of them tribal chiefs, will hold a pow-wow tomorrow night which Colonel Biby asserted will be the greatest ever staged in the middle-west with regard to the number of tribes represented.

Tokepa has made a far-reaching plans for housing and feeding its guests. All special trains will be met by automobiles and busses for free transportation to the scene of festivities.

The city has installed 10-spigot drinking fountains on 30 downtown street corners, while more than 200 sandwich and refreshments stands have been licensed for the occasion.

Topeka streets today were ablaze with decorations. More than 15,000 yards of flags, bunting and sunflower drapes were used for ten blocks of Kansas avenue alone. On the city's tallest building went up an enormous canvas portrait of Governor Landon, five stories tall, the width of three office suites and weighing 500 pounds.

All platforms on the south portico of the State House steps, from which Governor Landon will speak, have been completed. Radio engineers are today working on facilities that will carry the nominee's message to the Nation over four radio networks.

The formal ceremonies are scheduled to begin at 4 p. m., C. S. T., lasting an hour.

Landon Win Certain Says Paul Block

London July 22 (US)—It will be "President Alfred M. Landon" in 1937, Paul Block, American newspaper publisher, told Great Britian today. Block who has just arrived in London from the United States, stated:

"There is nothing of which I have ever been more certain than that Governor Landon will replace President Roosevelt in the White House."

Surgeon Robbed Of Patients' Gift

Police were today seeking the thief who stole one of the most treasured possessions of Dr. Martin H. Spellman, noted Boston surgeon, while he was visiting St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

It was a gold watch which Dr. Spellman had received from two patients after he had saved their lives through surgical skill. The thieves also took $60 in cash, a gold ring set with an emerald and two diamonds.

FRENCH STRIKE SPREADS TO FARMS

70,000 NOW IDLE NEAR PARIS

Paris, July 22 (AP)—The French strike surged suddenly forward today, spreading to farms near Paris, and automobile factories and metal works in the north of France in the three-month-old labor movement.

The total number of strikers, which was 37,000 Monday, mounted to more than 70,000 as 25,000 metallurgists at Belfort and Montbellard declared a general strike and 6,000 automobile workers and 3,000 farmhands remained out. All demanded collective contracts.

The Red Flag was raised over the Peugeot automobile plant, near Montbellard, where workers barricaded entrances. Most strikers refrained from occupying the premises.

The government permitted a halt of stay-in strikes by force if necessary and hastened the conciliation procedure as the prefects negotiated with delegates of the workers and employers.

Miss Hepburn Hurt Making Film

Farm Poll For Landon In Kansas

Topeka, Kan., July 22 (US)—On the basis of a sample poll of 1331 rural Iowa homes, made public today, Governor Alfred M. Landon is favored for President over Franklin D. Roosevelt by 57.4 per cent of the farmers of that state.

The vote and the percentages:

Landon 764, 57.4; Roosevelt, 494, 37.1; Lemke, 66, 3.1l, others 5, 0.4.

The poll also showed that 83.5 per cent of Iowa farmers who voted Republican in 1932 will do so again, while President Roosevelt will retain only 67 per cent of his vote in that year.

DIGHTON TRACK PROBE SECRET

LONE WITNESS IS HEARD

The Massachusetts Racing Commission, opening a hearing against the Dighton dog track today, closed its doors to the public and the press.

Contrary to expectations, and against requests of both sides in the dispute involving a Boston high school teacher and the track management, Chairman Charles F. Connors ordered that the hearing be private.

James Egan, head of the track organization, appeared with his counsel, Thomas H. Mahony, and a dozen witnesses, while the teacher, Charles F. Murphy, was alone. His companions at the time of the trouble at the track did not show up.

Murphy alleges he and two companions were "herded" into an office at the track and held against their will after they had been overheard checking the accuracy of the totalisator board which records pay-offs on the dogs.

Chairman Conors has threatened to suspend the license of the track if Murphy's story of mistreatment is substantiated.

Mrs. Gray Gets Gift Of Old Glass

A 60-year-old piece of Sandwich glass, bearing an inscription memorializing the 100th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, today was presented to Mrs. Jams Cunningham Gray, chairman of the American Constitutionslists "Women's Committee of 1.000."

Presentation was made by Miss Bowditch Forbes, of Milton, in appreciation and as a tribute to Mrs. Gray for her outstanding organization work in making the women of America Constitution-conscious.

Miss Bowditch is interested in memorializing Abraham Lincoln. On her Milton estate she has a replica of the log cabin in which the Emancipator was born, and within it countless Lincoln antiques.

At the Copley Plaza headquarters of the organization, started last February, Mrs. Gray received the historically important glass to be maintained as a Constitution memento of the Women's Committee.

Upside Down Flag Stirs Cambridge

When Arlington Heights and North Cambridge subway-riders stepped out into Peabody square, Cambridge, this morning they rubbed their eyes and looked again at the fluttering flag atop the 120-foot flag-pole there. Yes, actually, the huge American flag was upside-down.

Hundreds of complaints were received at the City Hall, newspaper offices and at the office of Superintendent of Parks and Recreation Stephen H. Mahoney.

Mr. Mahoney immediately got in touch with the putter-uppers of the flag on the Revolutionary Memorial flag-pole and before he could say upside-down Old Glory was rightside up again.

CITY PRISON BATTLE PUTS 2 IN HOSPITAL

Locked in the same cell at City Tombs, two prisoners battled fiercely today, causing a near-panic among 75 other inmates.

Thomas Kelly, 62, of Saratoga street, East Boston, was slashed about the throat and scalp in a fight with John Moore, 55, of Nonant street, South End, who suffered a possible fracture of the skull, head lacerations and a black eye.

Both were rushed from the tombs to Haymarket Relief station where they were put under police guard. Moore was unconscious.

A razor blade was found in the cell where they fought and an investigation of its presence there was begun. Both men had been searched before being locked up.

Separately, Kelly and Moore were arrested on charges of drunkenness in the South End last night and presumably had no acquaintance.

Transferred to the tombs later, they were locked in the one cell and the fight began about an hour after they had been checked in.

Its cause was not determined. A prisoner occupying a nearby cell said a loud argument or short duration preceded the battle.

MILLION STEEL WORKERS IS LABOR'S AIM

Washington, July 22 (AP)—A disclosure that unionization of 1,000,000 workers was the aim of the present campaign to organize the steel industry was made today as informed sources said John L. Lewis and the American Federation of Labor were near a parting of the ways.

Phillip Murray, active head of the steel organization campaign, revealed the figure, almost double the objective previously announced.

At an informal press conference, the chairman of the steel workers organization committee said the drive already had been carried into steel fabricating plants as well as the basic production mills.

There are between 400,000 and 500,000 men and women employed in plants fabricating and processing steel, he said, in addition to approximately 500,000 workers who produce the metal.

attendants' dormitory on the hospital grounds.

STORY INCOHERENT

Dr. Johnston said his son could tell no coherent story of what happened and that he is a victim of hallucinations and a confused mind as a result of the beating he received.

Johnston demanded to leave City Hospital today and signed a release, but his father's arrival there put a stop to the procedure. Dr. Johnston said his son was in no condition to leave the hospital.

Not only was he beaten, the doctor revealed, but he was kicked in the head, stomach and side and several teeth were kicked from his jaw.

He said his own attempts to learn what actually occurred were met with a "conspiracy" on the attendants' dormitory but that he was determined to pursue his investigation with the police and would apply for warrants as soon as sufficient evidence was obtained.

EMPLOYED BY WPA

Johnston had been employed on a WPA grading job at the hospital, but had no connection with the institution and was not resident at the dormitory.

At the hospital today it was stated that two employes, on the night in question, found Johnston on the grounds, the worse for liquor and suffering from a black eye.

They took him into the dormitory, washed him and then took him to an outbuilding on the farm to rest, but he refused to stay there, according to the hospital.

The attendants then took him back to the dormitory and put him into a room on the third floor and left him and did not see him again, this version related. He was found on the ground outside the window a short time later.

Russian Doctor Sent to Westboro

A 64-year old Russian was arrested at his home in Marcella street, Cambridge, arraigned in East Cambridge court today for practicing medicine illegally and then sent to Westboro state hospital for observation.

The man gave the name of John Ossanook. He told the court he had been a registered physician in Russia and had been in this country ten years.

Police testified that physicians could find nothing wrong with the prescriptions, Dr. Bertram Baker, medicinal probational officer, however, examined Ossanook and recommended the observation period at Westboro.

Fake Eye Doctor Given 6 Months

Worcester, July 22—Samuel Bluestein, 59, of New York, was found guilty and sentenced to six months today in municipal court, on charges of illegal practice of medicine and larceny of $20. He appealed.

Police said he approached Charles H. Trowbridge, 81, of Oakham as a prospective purchaser of the aged man's farm and ended by treating his eyes and prescribing for glasses. Bluestein's son, Arthur, was found not guilty. Both were found not guilty in a similar case in which the complainant was Mrs. Edna Bullard of Oakham.

Subway Fall Hurts Waltham Woman

16 of Kin Here Share Hobo Wealth

Sixteen Greater Boston cousins and two in Belle Isle, Newfoundland, will share the $140,000 estate of James Thomas Kelly, Chicago hobo miser, it was indicated definitely today.

Special Probate Commissioner Irwin N. Walker so recommended to the probate court at Chicago.

Kelly, born in Charlestown, Christmas Day, 1873, accumulated this large estate after years of living in "flophouses" and pinching pennies.

Two wills submitted to the Chicago court were thrown out as fraudulent and eight persons jailed for advancing these wills.

Also, Mary J. Travers, James Henry Joseph Devine, also known as Joseph Lenine; Mary Ann Donnelly, also known as Annie J. Donnelly; Edward P. Nolan, Arthur H. Nolan, Francis J. Nolan, Francis J. Dwyer and James F. Dwyer.

Edward and Peter Hearn of Belle Isle, Newfoundland, were also named.

Frank J. Dwyer, James F. Dwyer, Annie J. Donnelly and Joseph Lenine, or Devine, are supposed to be City of Boston residents.

Kelly was for years a familiar figure in the hotlines frequented by "hoboes" and panhandlers, and on his death, February 26, 1935, the extent of his fortune created a sensation.

It is estimated, that after death taxes and claims are paid, each cousin will receive about $2000.

WOLLNER LINK IN GIRL DEATH SEEN FAILING

Asheville, N. C., July 22 (INS)—Daniel Gaddy, private detective and night watchman at the exclusive Battery Park hotel, is "the key" to the solution of the slaying of Helen Clevenger, pretty 18-year-old New York University co-ed, in the opinion of Sheriff Laurence Brown, who is conducting the investigation into the mysterious murder.

Not that the sheriff thinks Gaddy committed the crime. He does not. But he declared, he hoped Gaddy will "tell him something" when he again questions him in the county jail today.

Gaddy and four others, including Mark Wollner, handsome 30-year-old German-born violinist, are in custody "for questioning" in connection with the killing of Miss Clevenger, who was beaten and shot to death in Room 224 of the Battery Park hotel at 1 o'clock last Thursday morning during the blight of an electrical storm.

"Gaddy is not a suspect," Brown flatly asserted.

Suspicion seemed to be veering away from Wollner, too, and there was a prospect the musician might be released from custody within a day or two. Last night, for the first time since he was taken into custody Saturday night, Sheriff Brown questioned the man.

The investigation, therefore, today centered on what certain hotel employes were doing at the time Miss Clevenger's room was invaded.

Who possessed the pass key? Who inserted it in the lock? These were the questions around which the investigation now revolves.

Shaun Kelly, Harvard Grid Star, to Wed

Announcement was made by the girl's parents, Dr. and Mrs. John A. P. Millet, of New York and Cherry Hill road, Stockbridge.

Kelly's father and grandfather, both international lawyers and Harvard graduates, were born in France, but the former Harvard gridiron star was born in Germany.

His fiance's grandfather was the late Francis Davis Millet, American painter and war correspondent, who lost his life in the Titanic disaster.

A year ago last April, Miss Millet was among the American women presented to the late King George and Queen Mary at the first two courts of the year.

Miss Millet is among the most popular of New York debutantes. She made her debut in 1933 after completing attendance at Miss Hall's School, Pittsfield.

Kelly, graduated from Harvard cum laude last month. He plans to study at Oxford University before deciding on a profession.

SHIFT IN PWA MADE BY ICKES

Washington, July 22 (AP)—In a shakeup in the Public Works Administration's high command, Secretary Ickes today gave A. R. Cles, director of the housing division, part of the work formerly handled by Louis R. Glavis, famous investigator, who resigned last week.

Glavis has taken a less remunerative post as chief investigator for the Senate campaign expenditures committee.

Ickes separated the work formerly carried on by the Interior department Division of Investigation under Glavis' direction, putting Cles, a Chicagoan, in charge of the staff maintained to keep graft out of the Public Works Administration.

Honor Lynn Youth

ARTHUR FIEDLER JOSEPH BAISUCK

Arthur Fiedler, conductor of Esplanade Orchestra, presenting Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser check for $100 to Joseph Baisuck, of Lynn, winner of "Just You" Berton Braley ballad contest, before audience of 5000.

In the presence of more than 5000 music lovers attending last night's Esplanade concert, Joseph Baisuck, Lynn schoolboy winner of the "Just You" contest in the Berton Braley ballad competition, was presented with a $100 check, gift of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, sponsors of the contest.

The check was presented to young Baisuck by Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Esplanade concerts.

UNCOVER TALENT

In awarding the check to the contest winner Fiedler said:

"It is with great pleasure and honor that I award this check to the prize winning ballad in the Berton Braley Competition, sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

"Contests of this type aid in uncovering musical talent which may develop outstanding artists or composers in the music world."

TO STUDY MUSIC

Young Baisuck expects to enter New England Conservatory of Music in the fall where he will study composition.

The winner of the final half of the "Boondoggle Ballad" of the Berton Braley Competition will be announced within a few days.

AMOSKEAG RULING UNDER NEW ATTACK

As summonses for three Amoskeag mills executives were issued by the Sabath congressional committee today, a move was made to nullify Federal Judge George C. Sweeney's ruling for liquidation of the company.

Lawrence J. Harrington of Manchester, N. H., filed a petition seeking to have the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals rule that the principal place of business for Amoskeag was in Manchester.

This is an appeal from Judge Sweeney's original ruling on jurisdiction, before the liquidation hearing. If one is upset, the other may be, too.

MAY REOPEN CASE

Harrington's petition, if successful, would probably reopen the whole case before the U. S. district court at Manchester. Harrington is a holder of $117,000 in Amoskeag bonds.

The Amoskeag liquidation inquiry, begun by the Sabath committee, will result in a private hearing next Tuesday at the federal building. This meeting was put over from tomorrow, when it had been originally scheduled.

Technically the business of liquidating the concern is now starting, with the appointment of Frederic C. Dumaine and Joseph P. Carney as trustees in the bankruptcy.

PLACE OF BUSINESS

But Dumaine, treasurer and general manager for Amoskeag, may be called upon to fight Harrington's petition to the circuit court.

Dumaine, in the original jurisdictional hearing, successfully contended that executive control resided in Boston, that a majority of the stockholders' protective committee resided here, and that therefore Boston was "principal place of business."

"Flu" Cure Indicated At Harvard

Two Harvard University scientists today had accomplished a "miracle" of medical science—a method they hope will stamp out influenza.

Climaxing five years of experiment, Dr. W. F. Wells and Dr. H. W. Brown of Harvard Medical School discovered that ultra violet light—the ray of a thousand cures —may banish influenza from the earth as completely as smallpox, yellow fever and diphtheria have been banished.

Using a huge glass-lined tank, divided in two sections and tightly sealed to prevent escape of the deadly germs into the laboratory, the two scientists conducted their experiments with influenza virus obtained from Puerto Rico by field men of the Rockefeller Institute.

Into both sections of the tank they sprayed the deadly virus. Inside one section was an ultra violet light tube and the rays were allowed to permeate the tank. The other side was untreated.

Two ferrets were allowed to breath the air, one from the section treated by ultra violet light, and the other from the untreated section. The ferret breathing the ray-treated air remained perfectly healthy, while the other ferret contracted a severe case of influenza.

Clue to Stolen Taunton Bonds

Taunton, July 22—The first clue to yeggs who lasted the safe in the city treasurer's office here in February, 1935, has been discovered in a Connecticut bank, police announced today.

Two bonds, found among the assets of a closed bank in East Hampton, Ct., were among the $4000 loot taken in the local burglary.

These bonds, according to police, were put up as collateral for loans by one of four men held in Connecticut on charges of defrauding the bank of $32,000.

Pastor Favors 'Shorts' on Streets

Westport, Conn., July 22 (INS)—Shaking the community with his announcement favoring women wearing "shorts" on the street, the Rev. Richard T. Elliot, pastor of Saugatuck Congregational Church, went on record today approving the scanty attire of women for "health's sake."

Opposed by two other local clergymen, the Rev. Elliot said, "A woman's wear is her own business."

OVERTHROW OF SPAIN'S REDS NEAR, SAYS KNICKERBOCKER

today as we landed on the airfield in Burgos, first American journalists to reach the side of the rebels.

The rebels claim to be within fifty miles of Madrid and closing rapidly in on all sides. They declare that if the Madrid cabinet does not escape by air, the army will jail the ministers and try them for murder.

All ordinary communications with this side of Spain are cut off and it is impossible to enter the country by rail or motor, and airplanes run the risk of being shot down by pursuit planes of the combatants.

Nevertheless our British pilot, the famous ocean flier Captain Robert McIntosh of British Airways, got us through and after an exciting flight we landed under the muzzles of machine-guns which fortunately held their fire.

At first we were encircled by a curious mob of armed men and held under menace of their carbines until the Marquess De La Eliseda, Oxford graduate and Monarchist Deputy in the Spanish Parliament, arrived and rescued us.

REVOLT WINNING

Here where no foreign journalist had yet penetrated, we entered the headquarters of the northern army and met the reputed next premier of military Spain—Brigadier-General Emilio Mola.

And here amidst a whole population giving the Fascist salute in streets jammed with armed civilians marching arm in arm with the regular army and Monarchist troops, we obtained a startling and different picture of prospects of the Spanish rebellion from that which the outside world has so far received.

General Mola officially informed us:

"We have Navarre, the Asturias, Castile, Galicia, Leon, Aragon and Andalucia; in one word, all the garrisons of Spain are against the Marxist front."

This does not sound as though the "back of the revolt has been broken" as continental newspapers headline today, and if information at northern rebel headquarters here is correct, there is support for the army's assertion that their revolution is winning.

CLOSE ON MADRID

According to this information the rebels, who rebelled when the Monarchist hero Jose Calvo Sotelo was murdered, as they assert, "by order of the government and by government assassins," have now in their hands "all of Spain except Madrid, Bilbao and Barcelona."

The redoubtable General Francisco Franco, who opened the revolt in Morocco, is now according to Burgos information in the province of Toledo at the gates of Madrid, while upon the capital are converging, besides Franco's columns from the south, three motorized columns from the north.

The first column from Burgos is already nearing Somosierra. The second column from Valladolid, under command of General Ponte and the Marquess Bovela de Limia, has reached the mountain range of Gaudarrama.

NEW PREMIER SEEN

The third column, from Pamplona, composed largely of Monarchists, has reached Soria.

All three columns, it is asserted, are making swift progress under general direction of Mola.

This dignified gray-haired, scholarly general, who was director of public safety under the last Monarchist government and who upon outbreak of the revolt was commander of the Pamplona garrison, is now declared to be leading candidate for the premiership since the death of General Sanjurjo, who crossed in an airplane from exile in Portugal to join the army in Spain.

We sat in the crowd in front of the old city hall and watched Fascist youths salute and cheer General Mola on the balcony. Afterwards we waited while hundreds of citizens filed past to clasp his hand.

CAPTURE GENERALS

"The murder of Calvo Sotelo was the death of the government," exclaimed Mola as he turned to us.

"You must think from this demonstration how the whole country is behind us. It is a rising of the people against the red demigod. Only the deluded are resisting the rebirth of Spain."

Particularly heavy fighting continued in Barcelona, where according to information here it is untrue that government forces are victorious.

In Bilbao, the rebels assert, Colonel Ortiz De Zarate is leading an army against the Marxists. Seville, they declare, is in the hands of the army although Madrid forces still retain a foothold in that city and shooting continues.

San Sebastian, over which we flew today, fell into the hands of army rebels. Jubilantly too Burgos announced that the four principal generals who failed to go with the army against the government have been captured.

Two of the generals, Batet and Mena, are in jail here, while the famous General Nunes De Prado was captured in Sarragossa and General Gomez Caminero was caught on the Portuguese frontier.

PLANE SHOT DOWN

Burgos, in constant radio communication with other rebel centers, announces that the Madrid high commissioner in Morocco, Alvarez Buylla, has been shot.

Keenest experience of this exciting day for Burgos was capture of a government airplane. It was with nervous gratitude for our own escape that we learned that only two hours before our landing on the Burgos air field a government bombing airplane had been potted down and riddled with machine-gun fire. It had appeared over Burgos in an attempt to bomb Mola as he entered the city.

Two rebel army pursuit planes which accomplished this feat remained quiet as we circled over the field.

GIRLS AID FASCISTS

Until we were actually over Burgos, the country beneath us all the way from Biarritz was utterly without life.

In sharp contrast with the brilliant movement on the beach at Biarritz, the beach of Spanish San Sebastian was entirely deserted. Below, the railroad swept for scores of miles without sign of a train. Twice we flew over stretches of torn-up rails. Three times we passed over great railway yards filled with dead locomotives and motionless freight cars.

Smokeless factory chimneys gave evidence of the bitter steadfastness of the strikers. It is difficult, however, to reconcile Spain's general strike of workers against the army rebels with the fact that this city full of armed common people is on the army side.

Young girls joined Fascist youths in stopping automobiles, while truckloads of men in civilian clothing and carrying carbines rush up and down the streets. Hotel lobbies are crammed with armed men surrounded by their admirers—frequently beautiful senoritas.

Quincy Big Figure in Spain Revolt

It's a long way from Quincy to revolt-ridden Spain, but—

A Quincy man, Eric C. Wendelin, 31-year-old third secretary, is in charge of the American embassy at Madrid, because Ambassador Claude G. Bowers and the secretaries who rank Wendelin are in San Sebastian.

A former Quincy school teacher, Helene English Bradley, is the wife of U. S. Consul Leo J. Callanan of Dorchester, who had been dispatched to Barcelona to take over the consulate there. He is undoubtedly in the midst of the revolt now.

And the newly-launched U. S. cruiser Quincy, built in Fore River, Quincy, has been ordered to Spain to protect American citizens and property there.

Wendelin is a graduate of Quincy high school, Thayer Academy and Brown University. His father is a Quincy quarry worker.

Mrs. Callanan, a native of Ware, taught at Quincy high school and lived at 18 Washington street, Quincy.

Quincy Woman In Spain

U. S. Sends Warships to Spain

Washington, July 22 (AP)—As officials anxiously watched a race against time by two United States warships ordered to the rescue of Americans in war-torn Spain, the embassy at Madrid flashed word today of an important battle near Toledo between armed militia and rebel troops.

Eric C. Wendelin, third secretary of the embassy, reported to the State Department that all Americans in Madrid were safe, including employes of the telephone company.

His said the situation in Madrid at noon today (Spanish time) was quiet but tense and that the battle near Toledo still was raging.

A report sent at 1 p. m. (Spanish time) by Consul William W. Corcoran at Vigo said that rebel military and civilian Fascisti were in control of the city, that calm had been restored and that a general strike had broken out.

Corcoran said that the principal Galician cities "are completely dominated by rebels."

By flashing the orders to the battleship Oklahoma and the new fast cruiser Quincy yesterday, State Department officials revealed their concern over the situation arising from the civil combat in Spain.

The battleship Oklahoma was off Charbourg, France, yesterday, on a training cruise with midshipmen from Annapolis. The big ship was expected to reach the northern coast of Spain today.

The Quincy, a 10,000-ton cruiser recently completed at Quincy, Mass., was on the Atlantic on a shakedown cruise when the orders reached her. Naval experts figured she should reach Gibraltar Friday.

BATTLE RAGES NEAR U. S. ENVOY

Hendaye, France, July 22—Loyal Spaniards stormed the Biscay Bay resort of San Sebastian with an army of 2000 miners and with a mountain battery today in a desperate attempt to oust a rebel occupying force.

United States Ambassador Claude G. Bowers apparently was a virtual prisoner in the summer embassy in San Sebastian. The American embassy in Paris reported it could not get in touch with him, as wires were down.

Control of the city was reported uncertain.

It lies but ten miles from the French border.

The civil governor, who fled when the rebels seized the provincial capital, returned this morning with the army of miners which he had enrolled overnight.

Other government forces, which withdrew yesterday to Fort Guadalupe overlooking San Sebastian, opened artillery fire on the city.

The miners, serving as infantry, stormed the street barricades under the artillery barrage.

A British consul, who crossed the border into France to report to his government, said:

"The control of the city is uncertain. The rebels took it yesterday and held it overnight, but this morning, shortly after Fort Guadalupe began dropping shells, the civil governor, who had fled to a western province in Asturias, came back at the head of the miners, who are battling the rebel troops on the street."

PORT SHELLED BY WARSHIPS

Gibraltar, July 22 (INS)—Spanish warships today opened bombardment of Algeciras, important southern Spanish port now in rebel hands, according to word received here.

British authorities at Gibraltar refused a request from the rebel warships Libertad, Cervantes and Jaime, the First, for fuel supplies.

Gibraltar, July 22 (INS)—British troops were called into action today to protect British lives and property when Spanish government warships opened bombardment of Algeciras, a few miles to the north.

Red Committee Ready to Seize Reins in Madrid

Madrig, July 22—Extreme Leftists were reliably reported to have constituted a "Red committee" for Madrid today as the Leftist government moved field guns to the outskirts of the capital to bar the way against a rebel advance.

With official estimates showing about 1000 persons killed during the five days of fighting between rebellious Rightists and Leftists supporting the government the struggle appeared to observers to be developing into a battle for supremacy between Fascists and Marxists.

The latter predicted victory, although new uprisings were reported.

The function of the Red committee was not immediately explained. It was assumed by observers familiar with the situation in Spain, however, the committee was formed to take over the power of government should the present regime collapse.

(What elements comprised the committee was not stated. The designation "Red" might range from allied Communists and Socialists to Anarcho-Syndicalists.)

THEATER, CLUB SEIZED

The Europa motion picture theater in Madrid was converted into headquarters for the Anarcho-Syndicalists of the capital. They made it a storehouse for firearms and explosives.

The Communist party seized Conservative Catholic party headquarters in the Capital, announcing that henceforth the luxurious clubrooms would be Communist headquarters.

Shortly before noon the government issued a statement that it had crushed uprisings in Barcelona, Gijon, the Balearic Islands, Almeria, Malaga, Alcala da Henares, El Pardo and Madrid.

The government stated loyal troops would use tanks in an attempt to batter their way into the famous Alcazar Military Academy at Toledo.

The military cadets there, who had joined the rebellion, were fighting desperately against a loyal attack by artillery, infantry and tanks.

MINERS ENTER MADRID

It was said that rebels from El Padro, who were beaten yesterday by loyal forces, were making desperate efforts to join troops from Segovia in an attempt to march against Madrid.

Meanwhile radio stations seized by the rebels denied official reports that the rebels had been defeated in Barcelona and other cities.

As the government marched out columns of armed Communist and Socialist militiamen to support the artillery in defense of the capital, a detachment of 5,000 husky Asturian miners entered the city. The miners, vowing allegiance to the government, were armed with rifles and small bags of dynamite.

EXHIBIT TELLS STORY

The beautiful Holy Land exhibit is still attracting hundreds to Horticultural Hall. Here is shown Lydia Miecznkowski, guide at the exhibit, explaining one of the various displays to visitors.

'Feel' of Palestine Given Visitor

The story of Mary, Joseph and the Christ-child unravels itself like an interesting novel in the Holy Land exhibit now being shown at Horticultural Hall.

In an English class it would properly be called a novel of setting, so much attention is given to the intimate detail of the background.

But the characters are not neglected in this miniature mechanical novel. We have Mary, Joseph, the Child, the Apostles and numerous other Biblical characters pertinent to the story of the birth and crucifixion of the Saviour represented. Not represented as still figures, but given the life-like quality of movement.

And the authors of this mechanical marvel have not neglected the sequence of events of their historical tale.

NAZARETH SHOWN

The scene opens in the town of Nazareth, at the home of Joachim and Ann, parents of Marianne. The action of the scene is the announcement by the Angel Gabriel to Mary, the Virgin, of the coming of The Child.

The scene is surrounded by the intimate details of the ancient fountain of the Virgin where Mary journeyed to the spring for water.

The atmospheric effect is so strong with these innumerable touches that even the least-traveled person goes away from the exhibit with the feeling that he has had a "taste" of Palestine. He has the "feel" of the land, so admirably rendered are all details.

As the sequence of events follow, there is the workshop of Joseph where Jesus labored in His youth.

BIBLE COME TO LIFE

Other scenes of His youth include the synagogue where He worshipped and taught the people. Other events include, to mention a very few: The return from Egypt, the transfiguration of Christ, the miracle of the restoration to life of the young man Arni.

As the years pass and the Hero of our story matures, we have the flight of the Holy Family, their interception by robbers.

The climax is reached in the crucifixion and the denouement is the friends of Jesus bearing His body from the cross to the tomb.

The wealth of material represented, rightfully, calls for a second visit to the exhibit because the human eye cannot take in the entire detail of this work of a lifetime at one visit.

The exhibit, justly called the "eighth wonder of the world" is addressed to the varied interest of everyone.

To the child it is the most interesting of Sunday school lessons, to the adult it is his Bible come to life, to the student a bit of faithful and unusual rendition of history and to the aesthete, an artistic triumph.

It takes the most modern achievement of science to render the holiest of stories in its most successful fashion, is the thought of many as they wend their way out of the exhibition hall.

The opportunity afforded Bostonians in this presentation of the mechanical marvel of the twentieth century is one that cannot be afforded to be passed up. However, time grows short.

The show moves on the end of this week. So the days are numbered for those who would enjoy an unusual spectacle, as it is unanimously acclaimed.

Policeman Slain, Girl in Daze

Hempstead, N. Y., July 22 (AP)—Arnold F. Sissenwein, 37, a New York City policeman was found shot to death in his parked automobile today in what Nassau County police believe was an attempted murder and suicide.

His body was found after Miss Dorothy Hoeppner, 24, of Brooklyn told police she arrived home in a dazed condition after riding with the policeman. She said she was unable to remember what happened to her or how she got home.

Betty Alden on 'Beacon Hill'

Yachting and Tennis Hold Social Spotlight for Week

By BETTY ALDEN

GRAVELLY BROOK FARM in Topsfield has been left to its own resources this week, for the John S. Lawrence family has journied afield in quest of silver sporting trophies . . . and though Isabel has given up hopes of winning the women's singles cup at Longwood for another year, she still has the consolation that her father may bring home the President Franklin D. Roosevelt bowl . . .

ISABEL LAWRENCE

this is the trophy awarded the winner of the 30 meter series of races off the Beverly Yacht Club at Marion . . .

Mr. Lawrence sailed his Moose to victory round the twelve and one half mile triangular course Monday . . . and apparently had won a leg on the bowl . . .

But due to some confusion about one of the buoy markings the race committee decided to re-sail the race today . . .

So Mr. Lawrence and his crew are now sailing around the course again in an effort to win the race which they thought they had already won . . .

Lincoln Davis in his Starling, Ernest B. Dane, Jr.'s, Bacardi, both of Marblehead, Paul Dudley Dean's Fleet Wing, and George R. Poor's Skijold VII will furnish some of the toughest competition in the race . . .

Decks of the spectators boats will be lined with other yachtsmen who are competing in the present series of races at Marion . . . Kitty Fiske, who sailed her Little Kitty in the Herreshoff 12-footers class on Monday will be watching with enthusiasm, and so will Eleanor S. Van Kleeck who is in training for a hectic debutante winter ahead and sailing her Shucks almost daily in the waters of Buzzards Bay . . .

Other good sailors among the social crowd in Marion who will watch today's race with great interest are Talbot Baker, Orrin G. Wood, Robert Albers and Sam Crocker . . .

While her father was preparing for today's race, tightening halyards and getting everything in shipshape order yesterday morning, Isabel was playing her first round match at the Longwood Cricket Club against Elizabeth Blackman of Detroit . . .

She is not the only North Shore sportswoman trying her luck for the Longwood Trophy, however, for her good friend Alice Burrage is entered, and also Kay Winthrop who came through her first two rounds with flying colors . . . In her second match Kay defeated vivacious little Joanna Palfrey, the youngest of the famous tennis playing sisters, while the mother of our leading tennis family, Mrs. John G. Palfrey, and John, Jr., sat in the gallery and lent their moral support . . .

Longwood's Galleries Crowded

ALL AFTERNOON the galleries were full of tennis fans, and there were many socialites among them . . . Marietta Howe and Anne Soule, who drove in from Dedham for the matches, couldn't be missed in the throng for they wore the brightest outfits of the day . . . Marietta's tweed suit was of very bright rose with a fur collar, and Anne's was just as intense a shade of blue . . .

Nearly everyone else had dressed in deference to the threating skies and there were plenty of gabardines and dark tweeds . . . Mrs. Herbert B. Shaw, who is an up and coming member of the house committee at Longwood, wore a nice looking light navy dress, with hat and bag to match, under her sturdy gabardine, and Vadge Ellis was in pale green tweeds from head to toe . . .

Mrs. Benjamin A. G. Thorndike came in from Dedham with a couple of friends and intently followed every play in the exciting match between Henry Culley and Walter Senior . . . Annette Hollis and her fiance, Edward Orlandini, were accompanied by Mrs. Arthur Ingalls, all three making their second visit at the matches in as many days . . . Annette, as usual, was very well groomed in a beige wool crepe dress trimmed with dark brown, belt, kerchief and hat . . . and her companion, Mrs. Ingalls, wore a soft tweed suit of canary yellow . . .

Reinette Plimpton and her father, T. Barnet Plimpton, were also there as were Mrs. Robert Farrington, Marjorie Morrill Painter, and many others . . . too many to mention . . .

Dudley Pickman's Tricky Gown

LEAVES FROM A SOCIETY editor's scrapbook . . . Nancy Cochrane, the Dudley Pickman's debutante daughter, has a very tricky dress which came back from Europe in her Paris wardrobe . . . it's of natural linen embroidered with blue and red figures, and upon studying it a minute one discovers that each figure is a letter in Nancy's name . . . Mrs. Fred Brown of Cohasset has gone abroad for the rest of the summer, which leaves quite a void in the yachting and bridge playing set on the South Shore . . . Mrs. Brown's house boat has been the scene of a great deal of entertaining, and she has been one of the leading lights at the contract and duplicate parties at the Yacht Club . . . The Henry Laughlins of Concord, who are spending the summer in an old castle in Ireland, haven't had a minute to get homesick for this country . . . they've been literally swamped with visitors, for all their friends include the castle on their list of "things-to-be-seen" the minute the itinerary of their summer travels lands them on the Emerald Isle . . .

NORTH SHORE SPORTS CALENDAR KEEPS HER BUSY ALL SUMMER

Baker Yacht On Cruise

The two little Cairn terriers which belong to Mrs. George F. Baker are demanding a lot more attention than all the prominent guests which Mr. and Mrs. Baker have aboard their palatial yacht Viking, as they make a week's cruise through eastern waters.

On Monday, the departure of the 272-foot craft from Newport, R. I., was held up for a few hours because the two dogs were missing. A diligent searching party found them at Beaulieu, the Newport home of Brigadier General and Mrs. Cornelious Vanderbilt. They had strayed there from Rosecliff, Mr. and Mrs. Herman N. Oelrich's place, where Mr. and Mrs. Baker had been visiting the day before.

When the Viking put in at Gloucester harbor yesterday morning, the terriers again captured the spotlight. Mr. Baker went ashore in a launch and took them along so that they might stretch their sea legs. A large crowd had gathered on the dock to get a look at the financier who owned such a large pleasure yacht, and one of the spectators had a large police dog. As soon as they had their feet on the ground the two small Cairns burst into full cry and tried to attack the large dog, entirely unmindful of the fact that the legs of their millionaire owner were becoming very much tangled up with their leashes.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker's guests on the cruise are Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas, William Rhinelander Stewart and Wadsworth R. Lewis.

Each Salisbury Beach Slot Machine Nets $100 Weekly

DEVICE TAKES COIN EVERY 10 SECONDS

(This is the last in a series of articles dealing with the amazing spread of the slot machine racket in New England, a racket which gives the operators some $4,160,000 annually.)

Something has happened to the slot machines in several speakeasies at Salisbury Beach, which is on the Massachusetts - New Hampshire border line.

They were there and were getting a large play when the Boston Evening American investigator stepped in for the first time—when he was looking over the spots and lining them up for the cameraman.

But someone apparently became suspicious, and the machines had mysteriously disappeared on the second visit to these speakeasies, which operate as liquor selling places without benefit of license, because the beach season is too short to be bothered paying out money for the legal paper.

However, the machines have not been removed from McIver's Diner at Salisbury Beach and the three of them were still there on the second visit—a nickel, a dime and a quarter machine.

RESORT OF SPORTS

McIvers Diner, the investigator was told by an attendant, is a focal point for the sporting element frequenting the beach and is the one spot in Salisbury where the machines have not been installed by a racketeer operator.

According to the attendant, the machines were bought outright, for a total of $345 for the three, from the Jennings Manufacturing Company in Chicago.

They were purchased in July of last year—and within 13 days after they had been installed they had paid for themselves.

The attendant declared that no police protection was being paid on the machines but that when a policeman came into the diner and looked at them he expected, and received, a substantial meal.

Salisbury Beach policemen, it came out during the talk, eat up between $80 and $90 worth of food each month in the diner, but this is but a drop in the bucket to what the machines take in, it was disclosed.

The investigator learned that several attempts have been made to hijack the McIver machines, but each time the racketeers have been outsmarted.

HIJACKERS FOILED

Instead of the machines being removed and placed in the backyard of the diner—where the hijackers could immediately sneak them away—they have been taken home after the racketeers telephoned and warned that the law was on its way to confiscate the devices.

It was the opinion of the attendant that each machine took in about $100 a week during the summer season and approximately $35 a week in the winter or slack season.

"But Mac doesn't pay the cops anything," the attendant said. They get plenty out of the bigger dealers and he gives them all the freds they want—why should he pay?"

Salisbury Beach is a spot where there has been much undercurrent seething growing out of jockeying by rival racketeers for spots in which to place their slot machines.

But there now exists even more of unrest beneath the surface in the slot machine racket in New Hampshire, where it is just as illegal as in Massachusetts but where local officials in many communities refuse to lop off part of their incomes and stamp out this type of gambling.

FORBIDDEN BY LAW

"Slot machines, any slot machine," says the New Hampshire statute, "or other machines or appliances intended for the purpose of winning money or any other thing by chance or hazards, is a gambling implement, and all laws relating to gambling implements shall include all such machines and appliances.

"No person shall keep any house, shop or place resorted to for the purpose of gambling, or let any such place for that purpose, or suffer any person to gamble in any way in any such place which is under his care or control.

"Every person who plays at a game of chance or skill in a place which is resorted to for the purpose of gambling, unless it shall be shown that the game was for amusement only, without a stake or possibility of gain or loss, and every person who is present at such a place when any game or sport is being played for money or other stake, shall be deemed to be a gambler.

"All furniture, fixtures and personal property, and all implements for gambling and gambling apparatus, used or kept or provided to be used in unlawful gaming in any gaming house, or in any building, apartment or place resorted to for unlawful gaming, and found therein by any officer, shall be forfeited.

RACKET FLOURISHES

"No person shall make or put up a lottery or pretended lottery or shall dispose of, or offer or pretend to dispose of, any money or property, real or personal, by lottery, or in any such way that a hope or expectation of gain by luck or chance is made an inducement to pay for such property, or for any share or chance therein.

"No person shall sell any article or thing whatever, the purchaser expecting by reason of any disclosure, publication or course of business of anyone having any connection with the sale, that he will receive some other thing in addition."

Clearly, through this law, slot machines as now operated in many New Hampshire communities are illegal, even slot machines which seek to circumvent the law by giving candy or gum balls or other nominal returns with each play—to "cover the law," according to the proprietors.

But the slot machine racket will flourish in New Hampshire as well as sleuthing, so long as there are gullibles who continue to shove a dollar into the machines and be content with receiving back 35 cents or 20 cents—and so long as there are officials in power who will wink at the operations for their own personal profit.

Entrance to Playland, Hampton Beach, where "television poker," pin games, iron-claws and other coin-operated devices thrive on summer visitors. Here is where you may win a prize, exchange your coupons for a toilet set, if you win enough coupons and, in the event you do not like the prize, you may sell it to the proprietors. It's being done at this resort.

This nickel-grabber at Salisbury Beach does very well for itself indeed. It takes away the nickels at the rate of one every 10 seconds. The jackpot was emptied three days before this picture was taken, and was not due to pay again until at least $75 had gone into the tubes.

Monaghan Has Lead in Primary

Helena, Mont., July 22 (AP)—United States Senator James E. Murray and Rep. Joseph P. Monaghan were in a close race today for the Democratic senatorial nomination as returns came in slowly from Montana's primary election.

Unofficial returns from 100 of the states 1237 precincts gave Representative Monaghan a narrow margin over Senator Murray. Monaghan polled 6069 votes and Murray 6,021.

'HUNGER ARMY' IN CAPITOL

Harrisburg, Pa., July 22 (AP)—Self-styled "hunger army" of several hundred coalless men, women and children, demanding $100,000,000 for relief of the unemployed "camped" in the vast rotunda of Pennsylvania's capitol today. The state's relief treasury was drained at midnight. The Legislature, unable to agree upon a tax program or on how to provide money for the emergency, quit at dusk for the day.

They were jeered by the advance guard of the "marchers," who took over the rotunda, unmolested, held a "mock session" on the grand staircase and pledged "to stay here until we get 64 cents a day for food."

The "marchers" slept wherever they found a place. Cots set up on the Tromda Galleries, at the doors of the house and senate, were given to some of the women and children. Shortly after midnight a large group took possession of the cafeteria in the basement of the capitol.

Leaders sent telegrams to 37 "key centers" in the state asking for reinforcements to bring the legislature to its "senses."

2 HELD AFTER SEIZURE OF SLOT MACHINES

Lawrence, July 22—Two men, arrested yesterday in a Connecticut truck that allegedly carried five jackpot slot machines, two pinball machines and more than 100 punch-boards, were arraigned today in district court.

The men, Herman Pollock, 44, of Fairfield avenue, Bridgeport, Conn., and Otto Goldman 42, of Cottage avenue, New York, pleaded not guilty to a charge of being in possession of a device for the purpose of sale to promote a lottery.

Upon request of their counsel, Attorney Thomas J. Lane, who is also a state representative, a continuance until tomorrow was granted by Judge Frederic N. Chandler.

Attorney Lane told the court he wished more time to look up the law, as he believed there were some fine legal points involved.

ADDITIONAL CHARGE

The defendants' lawyer was then advised by Assistant Marshal Marcel A. Barry, prosecuting the case, that an additional complaint would be sought against the men, charging them specifically with having punchboards in their possession, the present charge referring only to the slot machines.

Meanwhile, the truck seized with the men was under police guard in a local garage, with orders not to release it until completion of the case.

The two men were arrested yesterday by Patrolman George C. Sweeney, former head of the liquor and vice squad, whose suspicions were aroused when he heard them asking directions to Park street.

It is in Park street that one of the biggest slot machine racketeers in New England makes his headquarters, as revealed this week in the Boston Evening American series on the spread of the slot machine racket in New England.

ARRESTS FAIR

Patrolman Sweeney covers Park street as part of his beat, and he hastened over to wait for the Connecticut truck and see what transpired.

According to the policeman, he later heard the men discussing slot machines with a storekeeper in Park street, and he placed the visiting pair under arrest when he found the slot machines and punchboards in the truck.

QUIZ FIRED WORKER

Waltham Father in Death Probe

A respected citizen of Waltham, father of several grown children and recently discharged by the firm is to be grilled today by state detectives as the possible key man in the slaying of Harry E. Bradley, Waltham Watch Company watchman.

He is believed to have furnished information as to the layout of the plant.

State detectives, convinced they had started on the wrong track when they sought amateur burglars for the killing, admitted today they were now leaning strongly to the theory that Bradley had come across hardened criminals, safe blowers, about to begin their work.

Working on this new theory, the State detectives divulged today they had the name of a recently discharged employe as a person who could help them in the solution of the most brutal crime in Middlesex county since the Di Stasio torch murder in Sudbury.

It was learned exclusively today by the Boston Evening American that the police have compiled three separate lists of suspects in connection with their probe.

One is a list of every person with whom Bradley was acquainted. The second list is that of all persons discharged from the Waltham Watch Co. within the last two years.

Authorities admitted today that if one of the four participants involved in the strangulation murder of Bradley come forward within the next 24 hours, admits his part in the cold blooded killing and names his associates, he will be given consideration by the authorities.

"THE BOY CASTAWAYS" BY JULES VERNE

SYNOPSIS

Fourteen boys, ranging in ages from 8 to 14, and the Negro cabin boy, Moko, were about to enjoy a vacation cruise aboard the yacht Sloughi, when, late on the night of February 14, 1860, it loses its moorings and is blown far out to sea from Auckland, New Zealand.

After more than three stormy weeks on the South Pacific ocean, the Sloughi is tossed on a strange shore as the climax of a terrific storm on March 10, 1860.

The boys (excepting Moko) are pupils of the Chairman Boarding School, named: Gordon, an American, age 14; Briant, 13, and his younger brother, Jack; Doniphan and his cousin, Cross, 13; Baxter, 13; Webb, Wilcox, Garnett and Service, each about 12; Jenkins and Iverson, 9, and Dole and Costar just past 8.

They are now engaged in exploring their strange haven; whether they are on an island is still a question. Early in April, they discovered a man's skeleton and his long abandoned cave home; also his watch, utensils, an inscription dated "F. B., 1807," and—most important of all—a map of the island, drawn by one Francois Baudoin, who evidently had been cast ashore there.

The boys decide to move into the cave as winter is on the way and the Sloughi is being worn away by the wash of the sea.

CHAPTER XV

"Where shall we live until we can move into the cave?" asked Doniphan.

"Under a tent, on the bank of the river between the trees," replied Gordon.

"That's the best thing to do," said Briant, "and without losing an hour!"

He was right. The demolishing of the yacht, the discharging of the material and the provisions, and the construction of a raft, to transport the cargo would take at least a month.

Before they could leave, Sloughi Bay It would be the first days of May, which correspond to the first days of November in the Boreal Hemisphere.

Gordon chose the bank of the river to establish the new encampment since the transportation would have to be by water. It was the most direct and convenient way. By utilizing, during the tides, the flux which was felt right up to the lake, a raft would arrive at its destination without too much trouble.

Briant had carefully noted that the higher course of the river offered no obstacles. A new exploration to discover the lower course from the quagmire to its mouth was done with a yawl.

Briant and Moko found that this course was equally navigable . . . there was an easy way of communication between Sloughi Bay and French Den.

The following days were employed in preparing the encampment on the bank of the river. The lower branches of two beech trees joined to a third tree by long spars, supported the large spare sail, which was big enough for all sides to hang in the ground. To this tent, solidly moored, they transported the beds, the utensils, the arms and munitions, and the bales of provisions.

The weather remained dry and the work was done under good conditions.

About April 15th there was nothing left on board the schooner but the heavy cargo, which could only be removed after demolishment, such as the pig-iron which was used as ballast, the water tanks, in the hull, the capstan and the galley stove, too heavy to be lifted without some machinery.

The rigging, mizzen mast, sail yards, shrouds, and iron backstays, chains, anchors, cordage to line rope yarns, and oakum had been transported close to the tent.

Pressing as this work was, the daily needs could not be neglected. Each day Doniphan, Webb and Wilcox spent several hours hunting rock pigeons and other fowl. The young ones gathered shell-fish when the tide left the reef-bank dry. Jack worked with his young companions, but never joined in their laughter.

And as the work progressed with a method in which one could feel the firm hand and practical sense of Gordon, Doniphan accepted from him what he would never have taken from Briant or any other. Altogether peace and quiet ruled all this little world.

Nevertheless, it was important to hurry. The second fortnight of April was not so good. The mean temperature lowered sensibly. Several early mornings the thermometer fell to zero centigrade. Winter was coming soon, and with it would appear cold, snow, and storms, so fearful in the high latitudes of the Pacific.

The boys put on the heavy sweaters, trousers of thick material, and woolen coats, prepared against a rigorous winter. Gordon's notebook classified all these clothes by quality and size. Briant especially watched the younger ones. He was careful that they should not have cold feet or be exposed to chill draughts when they perspired.

At the least cold they were kept in the tent or put to bed near a brazier fire. Several times Dole and Costar were kept in, and Moko did not spare the hot drinks with ingredients from the yacht's pharmacy.

After the cargo had been unloaded, they started to attack the hull which was cracking in every part. The copper linings were lifted carefully for use in fishing up French Den.

It was difficult work to take out the boards which were nailed and riveted to the shell, and it was not done without many hardships by those inexperienced hands and those arms of limited strength. As a result the demolition was slow, when on April 25 a violent storm came to their aid during the night.

Lightning and thunder terrified the young ones. Fortunately it did not rain, but several times it was necessary to hold the tent against the fury of the wind.

The yacht exposed to the heavy seas and beaten by enormous defurling waves, was demolished. The boarding wrenched out, the frame dislocated, the keel broken up by the constant pounding, it was soon reduced to the state of spars.

There was no reason to complain of this, since the retiring waves carried away only a part of those spars which for the most part were caught on the pointed heads of the reefs. The hardware would not be difficult to find again under the folds of the sand.

To this work everyone gave all his attention during the next few days The beams, the planks, the pig-iron in the hold, the springs which it had been impossible to remove before, were found lying here and there. All that was left was to transport it to the camp.

In time, although not without great fatigue, this was done. It was curious to see them all, harnessed to heavy pieces of wood, pulling together and urging each other by a thousand cries. They used spars as levers, and round logs of wood to roll off the heavy pieces.

The most difficult to move were the capstan, the cooking stove and the water-tanks, of which the weights were considerable. However, Baxter, mechanically skillful, showed much ability and zeal.

Under his direction, and with the advice of Moko, tackles were fixed to stakes sunk in the sand, which strengthened ten-fold the force of the young crew and enabled them to complete their work.

By the night of the 28th all that was left of the Sloughi had been transported to the place where they would start up the river.

"Tomorrow morning," said Gordon, "we'll begin building our big raft."

"Yes," replied Baxter, "and so we won't have the trouble of launching it, let's construct it on the water."

"That won't be easy!" observed Doniphan.

"Never mind, let's try!" answered Gordon. "Even though it's more trouble to build it that way, we won't have to worry about floating it."

That was the best way, and the next day they began to lay the foundation of the raft large enough to carry a heavy and cumbersome cargo.

The beams pulled out of the schooner, the former hull in two pieces, the foremast, the stump of the big mast, broken three feet above the deck, the rails, master beam, bowsprit, foremast, mainboom, poles, were at a place on the bank which the tide covered only at high tide.

The boys waited for that moment and when these pieces were lifted by the flux, they were sent to the surface of the river. There the longest ones were assembled, then united to each other by smaller ones put cross-ways and were solidly tied together.

In this way they obtained a solid base about thirty feet long by fifteen feet wide. They worked without rest all the next day, and the construction was finished when night came. Next day, at the rising tide could not sweep it away.

It was necessary now to build a platform on the skeleton raft. For this they used the planks of the deck and the boarding of the shell of the Sloughi. This work took three days. A thin ice was already seen on the waterholes between the reefs, and also on the banks of the river. The shelter of the tent was beginning to be insufficient with the warmth from the brazier. It was only by keeping close to each other and wrapping themselves up in blankets that Gordon and his comrades were able to fight against the wintering temperatures.

The platform had been built as solidly as possible, so it would not come apart en route and cause the boys to lose all their material in the river. To prevent such a catastrophe, it was better to retard the departure for 24 hours.

"Still," observed Briant, "we shouldn't wait beyond May 8."

"And why?" asked Gordon.

"Because day after tomorrow is the new moon," answered Briant, "and the tide will be higher for several days. The stronger the tide, the more it will help us to go up the river. If we're forced to pull this heavy raft with ropes or push it with boat-hooks, we'd never be able to go against the current."

"You're right," said Gordon, "We must leave in three days at the latest!"

They all decided not to rest until the work was completed.

They started loading on May 3, carefully, so the raft should be well balanced. Everyone, according to his strength, was employed in that work.

Jenkins, Iverson, Dole and Costar brought small things such as utensils, tools, instruments, to the platform, and Briant and Baxter methodically disposed of them in the way indicated by Gordon.

Sacrifice

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Few players realize the value of sacrifice bidding. It is correct to overbid deliberately when you think your loss, even doubled, will be less than if the opponents were permitted to play the hand.

Another advantage is that the opponents may decide to continue with their own bidding—and may be set themselves instead of setting you.

In today's hand West was guilty of a major bidding error when he failed to sacrifice at five hearts. His loss, doubled, won't have been only 200 points. As it was the opponents scored a game worth about 400 points.

East, dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

The bidding:

| East | South | West | North |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1◇ | 1♠ | 2♡ | 3♠ |
| 3♡ | 4♠ | Pass | Pass |
| Pass | | | |

South's jump to four spades was well chosen to give the impression of strength. He was by no means confident of making his contract but was sure West would go to four hearts over three spades.

Then he would have to bid four spades and the opponents might be in a better position to choose between doubling and continuing with hearts.

West was intimidated for no discernible reason. He should have gone to five hearts with some hope of making the contract.

Against four spades, West opened the deuce of diamonds. This was obviously a singleton and declarer lost no time in putting up dummy's Ace. He ruffed a heart in his hand and got back to dummy with a trump. Another heart was ruffed and dummy entered with a second high trump for a final heart ruff.

At this point South stopped to count out the hand. West had led a singleton diamond and had showed up with only one spade; he therefore had started with 11 cards in hearts and clubs.

These were six hearts and five clubs, since with a seven-card heart suit he undoubtedly would have bid again and with a six-card club suit, which would have been headed by the K-Q-J, he would have risked a five-club bid over four spades.

WE ALL LOOK forward to the arrival of the favorite season of the year when we can indulge in fresh corn-on-the-cob to our hearts content. Many are the discussions as to the proper way of eating and we even have it on the advice of one etiquette authority that we should be served at a large dinner party for the sight and sound of a crowd enjoying their corn-on-the-cob is too much for delicate folk. We've just seen an attractive set for serving the sweet, tender corn, with a platter—green to blend attractively with the color of the corn—and six individual plates shaped like the ears of corn and large enough to hold two ears. The set is completed with salt and pepper shakers. This individual service is an ideal way for serving and eating corn-on-the-cob. Sells for $1.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Romantic Day Dreaming Often Bar to Happy Matrimony

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Romantic day dreams too often give way to horrible nightmares. And many a sad-eyed spinster could have been a happy wife with husband, home and children of her own had she in days gone by dared to face reality instead of blissfully dwelling in a make-believe world of her own manufacture.

From the beginning of time, women have given endless hours to thinking about the mythical lover who somehow never managed to put in an appearance. Way back in the days of the Greeks and Romans, girls prayed that the handsome young gods might find their company more desirable than the thrones of high Olympus.

Later, in the Middle Ages, the mythical lover was supposed to ride up in mirror-like armour on a snow white steed. Bending low, he would scoop the lady of his heart into his arms and dash away to Paradise.

Today young gods and plumed knights are out of fashion, of course. But good-looking boys in sweaters are quite the vogue. And girls who could easily marry honest, substantial young men are apt to pass up the good matrimonial bet on the front porch and prefer to wait for the mythical, romantic lover who might come prancing out of nowhere.

My advice to all such young ones is MARRY THE GOOD LAD WHO LIVES NEXT DOOR. FORGET THE MYSTERIOUS STRANGER. HE SELDOM APPEARS AND WHEN HE HAS, WOMEN USUALLY HAVE FOUND HIM DISAPPOINTING.

Typical of girls who pine for mailed knights with chargers and armour is Miss Marion, who writes me this interesting letter:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Should a girl marry a boy who can give her everything when she feels deep down in her heart, that a more romantic man will come along?

My mother has no patience with me. She points out that I may live to be a hundred and never find as good a matrimonial chance as the one I now have. With her, marriage is not so much romance as a secure existence.

What would you do, Miss Fairfax? Should I wait as my heart tells me to do? Or should I marry this boy my mother likes and hope to learn to love him after marriage? MISS MARION.

MY DEAR CHILD:

I'd never tell girl to marry a boy she didn't like. That would be heartless and cruel. Love is as necessary to marriage as air is to man. It is matrimony's indispensable foundation.

But, since you do not really dislike this young man who loves you, I would suggest that you see more of him. Accept his invitations. Get into his auto. Drive away to dances, parties, theaters. And it's my bet you'll find him every bit as interesting as the romantic stranger you've been dreaming about.

All girls like to think that handsome Romeos await them somewhere in the distant future. It's good fun, this dwelling in a world of one's own making. But wise young women face facts and marry the men who love them, even though they be neither curly-headed gods nor plumed knight's

BEATRRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Married, and a mother at 15, I resolved to take up my cross and bear it. My husband, I realized from the first, was a confirmed philanderer, who fell in love with every woman he saw.

Now, after 25 years of misery, my health is gone and I have nothing left except my home and children, who adore me. My husband has been successful, in spite of his reputation. Yet most of his money goes for the entertainment of girls young enough to be his daughters.

Do you think I should divorce my husband, remarry and seek the happiness that has been denied me all these years?

M. D. A.

DEAR FRIEND:

Marriage is not easy for a woman of your age. Divorce would be less difficult, I admit. But of what use would it be? Men, even the older ones, are looking for young women filled with life and vitality. And you, poor thing, would be just plain "out of luck."

My advice to you is be satisfied with the comfortable home you have and the love of the sons and daughters who adore you. With such security and affection, you are richer than thousands of women, and you have every reason to consider yourself fortunate.

After 25 years of marriage you should be rather used to your husband's conduct. And if he's wasting too much of the family resources, you can, without too much trouble, have the courts set aside a liberal part of the funds for your support.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

For Sunshine's Gift to Goddess

POSED BY JOAN CRAWFORD.

WE CONDUCTED an experiment at a beach resort last week-end—all in the cause of beauty.

We intrusted our tender, easily burned skin to a new sunburn preventive, making it involves a human sacrifice on the alter of sun-worship.

It worked and we're very excited about it. This new product is going to be introduced into this country, although it's practically a national enthusiasm in European countries and lands as far away as India.

Despite very sacrificial and scientific about the whole experiment. We left a few patches of skin bare to the sun. The rest of our exposed skin was smeared with this golden clear liquid which has a pleasant fragrance and no stickiness whatever. (Bind won't stick to your skin!)

The unprotected patches are now flaming spots of lobster red, looking like little bonfires and looking less raw hamburg! The rest of our skin is, believe it or not, a yummy tan.

A few years ago it seems, a wealthy young man went skiing in the Alps. He was badly burned on a snowburn which, as you probably know, makes an ordinary sunburn a sissy matter in comparison. He came across a potion which not only cured the pain but kept him from getting blistered again.

So very ecstatic was the young man that he bought the formula and laboratories and went into the business himself. The product is now used in countries all over the world and last year won a number of honor and diploma from the International Congress of Dermatologists in Budapest.

It's the official lotion used in Turkish baths in India, Egypt and the Malay Peninsula to prevent sunburn and to act as a sunshade. That's one of the amazing things about this product. It's a highly effective germicide and can be used for poison ivy cuts and bruises as well as scalds and other burns.

If you would like to know the name of the new sunburn preventive which is also a treatment for poison ivy, athlete's foot and regular burns, are interested in the beach kit, telephone Liberty 4900. Or write Arline Gould, Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

LEARN to play while you are young. The "Teen Age is the formative age, and if you will go in for tennis, swimming, golf, hiking and all outdoor activities—and learn to do one or two of them well—you can count on a slim, lovely figure and the radiant health that is the basis of all beauty.

Don't waste these precious years letting your muscles get soft and lazy, going on diets which lessen your vitality, and doing without the sleep you need for good nerves and proper development.

Sports in your youth will give you good leg muscles, strong, shapely thighs, slim hips and a supple waist. With trained muscles throughout your body, you cannot get out of shape.

There is no time like youth for acquiring a posture that will carry you through to success. Stand up for every inch of your height. If you are a tall girl, capitalize on your height, and if you are short, stand tall. Stoped shoulders, sway back and slumping at this age will forever mar your figure.

Don't worry too much about your weight. Teen age curves go with health, beauty and a sunny disposition. Five or 10 pounds of rounded pulchritude are not enough to send you on a diet.

If you are definitely overweight, see your doctor before adopting any type of reducing diet. Forty pounds excess weight may mean glandular deficiency, which should be under the supervision. If you are a tall girl, can-20 pounds excess weight may be due entirely to wrong habits. You are not eating enough of the protective foods for your health and too many carbohydrates and fats for your weight.

You can lose the excess simply by the correction of your eating habits, not by going on a diet. You need lean meat, milk, eggs, fruits, vegetables and whole grain every day. Teen Age overweights do not need in-between-meal calories in the form of chocolate nut sundaes, sodas and candies. Cut out all piece-mealing. Also, if you are greatly overweight, it would be best for you to trim the fat from your meat, restrict desserts to fresh fruits, use milk instead of cream on fruits and cereals, and drink buttermilk or skimmed milk.

Married Comrades

By Adele Garrison

MADGE CRIES OVER APPROACH OF HER FATHER'S TRIP

CHAPTER 57

THERE WAS something so matter-of-fact in my father's voice and manner as he outlined the details of his coming departure that I felt the tension of my nerves and muscles lessen.

But he almost made it seem a natural thing for him to be spirited out of the farm house into the rear seat of a sedan, and there, concealed by blankets and parcels, be rushed by back roads through the night to some mysterious and hidden destination.

I knew, of course, what his plan implied. He would go into that place of concealment without anyone, save those cognizant of his secret, knowing that he had arrived. He would emerge from it with equal secrecy, and as far as anyone outside his circle knew, there would have been no visitor.

FURTHER INSTRUCTIONS

I thanked my particular lucky star for my father's matter-of-fact manner, which, I guessed, was assumed especially for my benefit. Otherwise, I do not believe I could have mustered the strength to reply, with the calmness I knew he expected of me, to the directions he gave immediately after he had outlined the ruse by which he hoped to leave the farm unobserved.

"And now, dear child," he said, "I shall well arrange to have a late dinner sent up here, on the pretense that I am indisposed, I shall be very grateful. You will use your own judgment, of course, in regard to the time you tell the others about my going.

"But, may I see little Faith again before she goes to sleep for the night, and before you spread the report of my indisposition? Otherwise, Mrs. Bickett, quite properly, would not permit me to see her. And will it be possible to send Junior—and Roderick, of course, to my room, before they go to bed?"

NO HINT OF DANGER

I paid a silent tribute to my father's composure. I knew—no one better—how his heartstrings must be twisted at this coming parting from the grandchildren whom he adored. But there was nothing in his face to indicate that the journey he contemplated was anything more than a brief and ordinary trips. His calmness made me ashamed to appear less poised than he.

"Of course, you shall see them," I promised. "And I will attend to everything. Won't you have time to lie down and rest a little before you go?"

"I am not tired, darling," he returned with a smile, "and Richard and I have much to do before we leave. I shall have plenty of time to rest where I am going. My game, for the most part, will be a waiting one."

HER COURAGE BREAKS

Till later then," I said, moving quickly toward the door, and forcing a smile to my lips as I waved him an airy adieu. But when I was outside the door, I fled, choking with sobs, to my own room and had my cry out—oh! phrase so familiar to women!—before bracing myself for the evening's ordeal.

I knew that when I left my room I must be braced against any show of emotion, even in bidding my father farewell, and I must not betray to any member of the family the fear I had that this was a journey in which chances against his return were overwhelming.

If there had been need for immediate action, I could have mastered my sobs—though by a nerve-racking effort—at once and gone about my wors. But the knowledge that I had plenty of time was like the opening of an ungarded gate, and my grief rushed over me.

It was a fortunate interlude, however. I sorely needed the relief of tears, and when I had finished my paroxysm of sobbing, I bathed my face, and lay down quietly for ten minutes.

At the end of the interval, I arose, not refreshed, but braced against anything the evening might bring forth. Donning a gown which I knew my father especially liked, I went out into the corridor; then, stepping to my mother-in-law's room

Long experience has taught me the indiscretion of speaking to anyone in the house before my mother-in-law is apprised of the news she would eventually learn. If she is not the first one told, she will find out the fact by devious ways known only to herself—and woe betide the bickle-dass disseminator of information!

So it was that though I wanted to go to Katherine first and gain the balm for my tense nerves which her calmness always brings me, I rapped instead on Mother Graham's door.

Reduce and Keep Well

OFF with those extra pounds this summer! No need to get two dinners, one for you and one for the family, either!

Just see how Mrs. Spratt manages. She plans a good dinner. She dishes up 476 calories of it for herself. Her dinner is well-balanced, appetizing. Then she just plain spoils that thin, hungry Mr. Spratt!

Look what he's getting! Everything Mrs. Spratt has, plus all the butter he wants, nine buttery rolls, walnuts and mayonnaise on his cole-slaw, extra cookies.

A glance at his plate shows you how just a few dabs of high-calory foods run up the calory count. Cream and sugar in coffee, rich salad dressing, thick gravies . . . these are your enemies when you're reducing!

So don't kid yourself about how much you eat. It's so easy to do that unless you have a handy list of foods counted for calorie values.

Better yet, have a list of good menus figured up by calories. Don't go on a freak diet, a starvation diet, or a kid-yourself diet. Don't wreck skin or teeth on a diet lacking in vitamins, minerals and other health essentials.

Don't make it hard for yourself while you melt those bulges. Get our 40-page booklet, CHANGE YOUR WEIGHT FOR BEAUTY'S SAKE.

Two weeks of delicious meals, tasty, interesting, with calories all counted. Plenty of cheerful encouragement from the author to keep you going. She knows. She's reduced—the safe way.

TOUR OF QUINTUPLET TOWN

BABIES FURNISH 'MAIN SHOW,' 'SIDE SHOWS' REAP RICHES

going there later—and arrive in Quintuplet Land before the throng.

Out here in the backwoods, nearly three miles from town, is the most cosmopolitan gathering place in the world, New York and Vienna not excepted, and certainly one of the most interesting spots in the universe.

This road, the old logging trail, was widened and smoothed because of the Quins.

Those three farms you glimpse along it have been there for many years.

First of the on-the-grounds business directly associated with the exhibition of the babies is the Indian Leather Goods-Souvenirs Blankets stand on the left-hand side of the road perhaps a quarter mile from the Dafoe Hospital.

This is a new stand which, because of its comparatively remote location, is not doing the business its proprietor believes should be coming his way. Of this, more later; don't stop here now.

A bit farther along and a bit closer to the site of the attraction, one encounters a large billboard which states that just ahead is:

"J. Dionne—Quintuplets View"

Proceeding a distance farther, with or without this advertising in mind, one reaches the stand of "J. Dionne—Quintuplets View—Quintuplet Postcards, Pictures, Souvenirs"

There is no view of the quintuplets from here, but that is all right; the postcards and the souvenirs and the pictures are very nice, indeed, and the several employes are willing and obliging.

This, also, is a comparatively new stand, having opened on May 24. Its proprietor is a gentleman by the name of Sam Pike, who says, frankly, that he contracted with J. Dionne, grandfather of the quins, for the use of his name and that this is all J. Dionne has to do with the stand.

You can get gas and oil and all the souvenirs, pictures and postcards you wish here, the only trouble with the location being that it is not quite close enough to Dafoe Hospital for the crowds.

As the hospital is our destination, we go along and come, presently, to a yellowish-green house of clapboard set close to the road beyond a little dip of land, where corn, onions, potatoes, rhubarb are growing in some confusion of recent neglect.

The curtains of this house are pulled down to the sills of the windows, the gate is tight, and above the gate is a large sign that states: "No Admission."

Staff Home

There are a horse and a bull in the meadow land beyond the house, a few chickens squawking around. There are a sand pail and a lard pail on the porch and from the clothes line, extended on a pulley arrangement over the garden, there are half a hundred children's garments of one type or another.

The drawn curtains, the absence of any person about the premises except a man pumping water down by the barn, gives one the impression that here, at least, is someone in Ontario who resents rather than welcomes the influx of the world curious to the exhibit of the Quins.

This first impression is the correct one for this farmhouse is the home of Ovila and Elzire Dionne and their six children including the infant Joseph Robert Telesphore Dionne.

Of Joseph Robert Telesphore Dionne—committed to exclusive pictures before he saw the light of day in this hospital group, of similar construction and appearance it is a rest room for tourists, now nearly completed. It is larger than the old State House.

Finish work, construction, blasting, welding are going on all around. Stuart W. Clide, permanent superintendent of construction, designed and built this layout, did a good job and apparently it will be permanent employment for some time to come.

About facing one another on the rise of ground beyond the dip in which the Dafoe Hospital buildings are situated are (1) the whitewashed farm home of Madame Legros and of Mrs. Dionne and one of

Dionne Faces New Woes

Callander, Ont., July 22 (U.S.)—Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets, chalked up another grievance against the board of guardians of his famous daughters.

Four of his milch cows died after drinking a solution used to temper drills in the construction of the new staff quarters adjoining the babies' hospital.

The cows had supplied milk for both the quintuplets and the other members of the Dionne family.

his deliverer, Dr. J. E. I. Joyal, of North Bay, told the writer

"This is a good baby, a normal baby. The mother, she is in fine condition and it would not hurt her to have quintuplets again."

Anyway, this house is the Dionne farmhouse where the quintuplets were born. Don't stop here, now. The tourists soon will be arriving and stopping and gawking and this is resented by those within the house.

Across the road from this house, just beginning to rear its skeleton of wood above a stone foundation, is what will be, when completed, the residence of the Dafoe Hospital staff.

Just beyond this building that is under construction, surrounded by a tall fence of heavy wire, is the Dafoe Hospital for the Dionne quintuplets, identified by a bronze plaque on the stone gateposts.

It is two stories in height, of brown, smoothed logs, trimmed in green and yellow paint with a red roof of fireproof shingle.

In it there are nursery and playroom, an office, bathrooms, dining room, a kitchen, bedrooms and (6-16 is correct—clothes closets. There is full plumbing and hot water heat.

The Dafoe Hospital, home of the quins, is not a pretentious dwelling except as it is viewed in contrast with the home across the road, where the quintuplets were born and where their parents, brothers and sisters still reside.

Life Job

Look back at this home for a minute. Half the side of the Dionne house has been obliterated from view by a huge billboard soliciting tourists to "Visit North Bay." That new, white-board fence, six feet high, surrounds the Dionne backyard so the other Dionne children not wards of the king, can play there unseen by the tourists, and unseeing.

The road spills out to a broad acreage this side of the Dionne home to make a parking space for all the cars that soon will be here. It is like a big lake into which a stream is flowing.

Just beyond the hospital, a matter of perhaps 100 yards, also set back from the road and surrounded by wire fence on which barbed wire is strung in places, is the new playground where the quintuplets, in an hour or so, will be on public exhibition.

This is a one-story building of octagonal shape, designed and painted to blend with the hospital. Later we will go in.

It has an entrance and two exits. The crowd, when it comes, will go round and round and come out here in two sections.

There are three or four big-letter signs warning visitors that no pictures of the quintuplets may be taken. This is strictly enforced because pictures are the source of largest revenue.

There is a large sign which reads as follows:

"Visitors' Information and Instruction:

"1—This playground has been erected so that you may see the children at play.

"2—Visitors will, by co-operating, and following instructions, assist those in charge.

"3—Please maintain silence and keep moving.

"4—Do not speak to children.

"5—You may enter as often as you wish during the visiting period, but in order to be fair to visitors you must keep moving towards the exits."

All right, leave it for a moment and glance across the road to the side on which the Dionne farmhouse is situated, a short distance back.

Here you have a fourth big build-

Welcome and souvenirs, plus a chance to buy refreshments predominate at this point in Callander, the home of the famed Dionne quintuplets. The refreshment stand is managed by Madame Legros and Madam Lebel, the midwives who aided at the birth of the five beautiful girls to Mrs. Dionne. They are now doing a big business with the tourists from all over the world. Note the sign over the store—which bids a welcome after explaining that the proprietresses were midwives to the quintuplets.

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

the midwives to the quintuplets, and (2) the refreshment and souvenir stand that is operated under the names of the two midwives, Madame Legros and Madame Lebel.

This is a flat-roofed, unsightly structure which proclaims its midwife authenticity in a building-long sign:

And souvenirs!

And how!

This place actually is conducted by a frank gent-man named P. Adams, now having a few difficulties with the quintuplet guardianship board and one should not miss a little chat with Mr. Adams and with the midwives, all three of whom will lay stress upon the fact, or claim, that before Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe arrived at the big convention of the storks, three of the quintuplets already had been safely delivered by the attending women.

HAMMOND DOG MISSING

Gloucester, July 22—John Hays Hammond, Jr., millionaire inventor, today anxiously awaited a kidnap ransom note which he hoped would result in the release of Boris, his $2000 10-year-old German Shepherd dog.

Although the disappearance was only reported to police here today, Hammond revealed the dog has been missing since Sunday.

According to police, Hammond seemed certain the dog was kidnaped from his Magnolia estate rather than having strayed off the premises. He said the dog had never left the estate in the past 10 years.

He also told police he believed it was a kidnaping because of the great deal of publicity the dog received several weeks ago.

Hammond in this instance referred to the dog being treated at Resteroft sanitarium in Rockland for arthritis.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

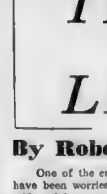
One of the crops of these depression years have been worries, doubts, perplexities, lack of self confidence, anxiety and the like. The proposition is self-evident. It can be tested, however, by a listing of published matter, articles and books, which have had considerable success by concentrating on these matters.



ROBERT E. ROGERS

There is obviously a large public that needs advice, self-analysis, encouragement, warning, and specific methods which will aid on toward the "good life." Pitkin's "Life Begins at Forty" and Dorothea Brandes' "Wake Up and Live," are two of the most notable and successful books on these themes.

In the August number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine a well known consulting psychologist, David Seabury, boils down a volume of experience and observation into a short article called "How to Worry Successfully."

Worry Is Natural, Psychologist Holds

According to Dr. Seabury, worrying is not a disease nor an abnormal state of mind. It is the most natural thing in the world. The trouble is that we do our necessary and inevitable worrying pretty unintelligently. Most of us have never learned how to worry.

Ask yourself, says David Seabury, a few analytic questions:

"Are you sure that you know what you are worrying about? No worry can come to you unless there is some weakness or lack in your mental outlook. You want friends—but are you friendly? You want money—but do you work for it intelligently? You want prestige—but what have you done worthy of honor?"

Isolate your chief worry and concentrate on it. Examine your life in relation to the basis factors of worry—food, sex, social position, money, identity, activity, the meaning of experience, desire for reward or satisfaction, relaxation and pleasure, home life. (Some of these, by the way, seem to me pretty far-fetched as a source of worry, but I'll take Dr. Seabury's word for them.)

Diagnose Worries To Be Successful

Diagnosis is the first law of successful worry. You know what is wrong with your life—but do you know what positive good you want instead. Selma Lagerlof, Swedish novelist and Nobel Prize winner, knew at the age of thirteen that she was going to be a novelist. She felt relieved and happy that the matter was settled. Henceforth she could put all her energy in being a novelist.

Decide what thing will bring you happiness. Follow your intuitions. Do the work you most desire to do. Never expect perfect success. Try to measure your progress over a period of time. If you can see evolution in your life, leave the matter there. Tomorrow will take care of itself.

Try to answer certain fundamental questions, as follows:

"Who is using up my time and interfering with my true progress?

"Who is confusing my mind, interfering with my normal mind?

"Who criticizes and makes me self-conscious?

"To what unnecessary thing am I giving undue attention?

"What things bother me and occupy too much of my emotional life?

"What are the things I need and could get, but am neglecting?

"What things am I doing that someone else could do?

"What bad habits can I change, such as procrastination or self-indulgence?

"What factors that affect my success do I neglect, when I could attend to them?

"What moods that waste my time, strength, and attention do I indulge in?

"What technique do I use to excuse my lapses?"

Correct Negatives Every Week, Advice

And then he hits a few don't which are more or less the secret of the whole business. They are pretty important and pretty practical, but my space is running out, and I am afraid that I shall have to let you look them up for yourself in Dr. Seabury's article in the August issue of the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

If you are like me, you will find plenty of material in these questions and answers which will apply, almost painfully, to your own particular case. For instance, the word "procrastination" hits me exactly where I live. What is your pet worry?

6 SAVED In Quincy BLAZE

4 CHILDREN CARRIED OUT

Trapped in a burning two and a half-story house at 219 Newbury avenue, Atlantic, a mother, her five children and a neighbor were rescued today after the neighbor had raced into the house to a'd.

Taken down over a ladder from an attic window were Mrs. Genevieve Nix, who rose from her sick bed; four Nix children, Everett, 10; Doris, 6, Tracy, 4, and Jeannette, 3, as well as John Cook of 33 Hollis avenue, brother of Pete Cook, captain-elect of the North Quincy High School football team.

Another neighbor, John Wallace of 224 Newbury avenue, rescued the fifth Nix child, one-year-old Shirley, from its crib in the smoke-filled second floor

Fire Starts

The fire started on the second floor rear piazza while Nix, a Montclair barber who had recently undergone an operation for an infected shoulder, was absent at a Boston Hospital receiving a treatment

Smoke pouring up from the piazza was seen by Mrs. Peter Cook of Hollis avenue, who called her son, John.

He raced over to the house forced open the lower floor door and found no one home in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Robertson

Proceeding upstairs Cook discovered Mrs. Nix and four children in the attic, but by that time so thick was the smoke pouring up the stairs that escape by that means was cut off

Firemen Arrive

Cook herded the mother and four children to the front attic window and had almost decided to attempt dropping the children into the arms of neighbors, because of the smoke and heat, when firemen arrived.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Nix, crying that her infant son was downstairs, had been forcibly restrained by Cook from going back, and she was still weeping when she, the children and Cook were taken down over a ladder raised by the firemen

The baby had been saved, however, by Wallace, who himself had to be assisted through the smoke-choked house by Horeman Clarence Metcalfe of Engine 2

Range oil sprayed the Nix kitchen when heat burst the two-gallon bottle beside the stove and fed the flames. Damage of about $3000 to the house was estimated.

ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD

DeMille's New, 63rd Picture Story of West

Ann Marsters, feature writer for the Boston Evening American, is back in Boston after a long visit to Hollywood. There she gathered and wrote the series, "Ann Marsters in Hollywood." This is the 45th story of the series.

By ANN MARSTERS

In the morning mail comes a letter from my friend, Rufus Blair, of the Paramount studios in Hollywood. He is all enthusiastic about Cecil De Mille's latest production, "The Plainsman," which, when I was there, was just in the "discussion" stage.

Now it's evidently getting along as you shall see from Mr. Blair's letter, which follows

"Miss Ann Marsters
"Boston American
"Boston, Mass.
"Dear Ann:
"Mr. Deeds came to town again —but this time he arrived on horseback wearing the black sombrero and black shirt of Wild Bill Hickok.

Jean Arthur Waits On Set For Cooper

"If you're a stickler for detail, you'll remember that Deeds' real name is Gary Cooper. Anyway, he arrived and found Jean Arthur waiting for him on a set which is all fixed up to look like a town of the year 1865.

"Gary and Jean are co-starred again—this time in 'The Plainsman,' De Mille's 63rd picture in a quarter of a century of picture making.

"'The Plainsman' is a story of the West during the decade following the war between the States, when corrupt politicians moved surplus army guns into Indian territory, arming the Redskins to make war on white men until it was stopped by Hickok and Buffalo Bill Cody.

"I stayed to watch a scene being shot—and so did nearly 200 newspaper correspondents. You'd have thought a world series was about to begin.

Three Towns in One, And All Different

"The setting is a crescent of pioneer stores with false fronts. The characters seem to stir the dust of 70 years as they walk through its rutted street. One tip of the crescent curves into a river where white boats anchor.

"When it comes time to film them, piles to which they are tied will be docks of St. Louis. Another corner of the three-acre area is a stage of sets represents docks of Leavenworth. So here are three towns, lavish and authentic in every detail; all important in American history, all merged upon the same site. Such is the magic of set building.

"The newspaper people and myself are perched on the upper deck of one of the River boats. Here typewriters clatter fire-lessly under prancing fingers of writers with deadlines to meet

"The transmitting keys of six telegraphers are kept busy. They come into play when the whistle blows to warn all within earshot that De Mille is about to film a scene. It is the first time a movie set ever has sported a genuine pressbox.

"Now the whistle blows

Portland, Ore., Girl Gets Her Chance

"Turning,' shouts the cameraman, and the sound man barks a number of sharp syllables. De Mille commands: 'Action!'

"Down there, before a harness and saddlery shop, Calamity Jane (Jean Arthur) lashes out with a bull whip at a brutal teamster, Fred Kohler. Her appearance is dainty, despite her mannish garb. But there is a wiry vengeance in her arm which whirls the lash. Kohler screams in pain as the whip stripes his flesh.

"In a corner of the set where the players' chairs are collected, a young girl turns her face away from the scene. She is Helen Burgess, of Portland, Oregon. She has never before appeared on the screen and is to make her debut as the wife of Buffalo Bill

"I think you'd be interested in hearing how she got this break. A studio scout saw her in a play at Hollywood's Little Theater and Paramount gave her a six months contract. But she was given nothing to do and they were not planning to renew her option. She would undoubtedly have faded out—but De Mille noticed her in a studio restaurant.

Tensely Dramatic Scene Pleases Director

"He arranged a test which revealed such conspicuous talent that he gave her one of the most important roles in 'The Plainsman.' That's a thing he has never before done for a complete unknown.

"When Calamity Jane brings down the final stinging blow on the cringing back of Kohler, De Mille shouts, 'Cut'

"He glances over toward the press workers and smiles his lenient, rather sardonic smile. The players relax. The typewriters take up their rapid staccato beat once again.

"It was a tensely dramatic scene and De Mille was obviously satisfied. Too bad you couldn't have been here to see it.

"Regards,
"RUFUS BLAIR."

JEAN ARTHUR GARY COOPER

Atlantic Family, Neighbors Rescued In Fire

Soviet Fliers Near End of Long Hop

Moscow, July 22 (AP)—Soviet fliers Cheliuskiff and Baidukoff reported by wireless today they had flown about 4,700 miles in their non-stop journey from Moscow to us over Petropavlovsk and over the Polar circle to far Siberia Kamchatka

JESSIE Costello HIDES

'FORGET ME' SHE PLEADS

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Jessie Costello went into complete seclusion today. She denied herself to everybody, save her attorney. To him, she wept:

"Why won't they leave me alone!—Tell them to forget me . . . tell them I want to be forgotten, to be left to shift for myself—without anybody else's concern."

Behind the drawn shades and within the darkened rooms of the cottage, which on Monday was sold over her head to the first bidder for $2500, Jessie and her three children quietly moved about

Rests in Den

Most of the day, she rested in the den. Her children, Anna, 13, Jessie, 9 and Bobbie, 6 whiled away the long drawn out hours as best they could. For their mother does not permit them to go out of doors.

The widow of Capt. Bill Costello, of whose poison saying she was acquitted on longer desires to be Miss Jessie, her attorney, Alan A. Zeiler of Salem, said, as he repeatedly has given a message

"Jessie is a changed woman. All the publicity and its attendant humiliation surrounding the sale of her home has left Mrs. Costello unnerved and worried," he said. "She knows she has to find other living quarters and that she must do it quickly, and she is really worried.

"Going to New Hampshire on her father's farm, is one of the possibilities.

"Mrs. Costello has about two weeks in which to move her belongings from the bay ave., house. She won't be bothered by the government before that."

Jessie lost her house, when unable to meet mortgage payments it was sold by the government and bought by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation for $6200 the incurred indebtedness, at an advertised auction of the property.

With the sale of her home, public interest in the acquitted widow was revived.

Several men and women hovered about the white and green cottage anticipating a glimpse of Jessie but they were disappointed. She remained indoors

Sees No One

She has steadfastly refused to see anyone, except her attorney, with whom she had numerous conferences as to her future plans.

There was only a slim possibility, Attorney Zeiler said, that Mrs. Costello would remain in Peabody, moving her belongings to an apartment or rooms.

It is more probable, he stated, that she would leave Peabody and have her children away from the scene of all her unhappiness.

"The oldest girl reads the newspapers—the other children are growing up and are old enough to understand," he explained, "and Jessie does not want them to keep reading about her. She is very anxious that she be given a chance to bring them up normally, away from notoriety, and away from the pointing fingers of the curious

"Jessie has had many set-backs since she was acquitted of the murder of her husband. She tried many times to obtain work and when she did, she could only hold the jobs for a short time. She hasn't tried to get work for quite some time, now, because she realizes the futility of it.

2-Gun Husband Divorced in Salem

Possession of a two-gun husband is no fun, particularly when you are awakened at 2 a. m. to pear into the barrels—and so Mrs. Dorothea R. Sands, 23, of Cottage street, Lynn, won a divorce today in Salem probate court

The allegedly self-proclaimed two-gun man she divorced is Martin E. Sand, proprietor of a Lynn filling station, whom she charged with cruel and abusive treatment

Married September 1, 1934, she was frequently threatened with Sand's revolvers thereafter, she testified Cruelty was also charged by Miss Cecile A. Peterson of Congress street, Salem, in winning a divorce from Herbert O. Peterson, son of Salem.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Annice Brink

When youngsters write in, eagerly sniffing out a way to join summer players . . . and basing their requests simply on nine lines of description on summer actors' ways and means as recorded in Girl About Town . . . you begin to realize what a grip the whole idea has on the adventurous and imaginative.

ANNICE BRINK

It once was beset with uncertainties. No fun to be stranded on the Cape or in New Hampshire foothills if the venture flopped.

Today, most summer actors' jobs are safe as a bank clerk's. Especially at the colony in Dennis which houses the Cape Playhouse and the breathtaking murals of Rockwell Kent-Jo Mielzner in the C

Washed by sea breezes and sun, and glowing in every corner with purple petunias and blue morning glories against silver-gray shingles, it is no wonder the place is a mecca. Another attraction is the indefinable aura of prosperity and happiness.

Famous names ask for vacations, if they are playing in New York, and come out for a week's work here. Bette Davis, Bob Montgomery and Zita Johann—among many others—started with Raymond Moore in Dennis.

Actor Too Perfect While Off Stage

Actors are generally taken on from New York. Rarely does anyone get in by the back door—coming directly to the playhouse and pestering the director.

Nothing is ever completely placid, undisturbing. I shall always remember with a little pang the actor that kept me company while I waited for an interview. Or perhaps I kept him company while he waited to see a director about a job.

In the informality of Cape sartorial effects —mostly sweaters and ducks or old flannels—his trickily dented and tipped grey felt, his dark blue suit, grey suede shoes whose heels were all but worn down, and a frayed but gayly plaided shirt looked strange. Thin, greying hair—thin, Barrymore face.

His smile was too perfect, too cheery. He told stray, interesting bits about the theater. About his character parts, and his Hollywood experiences.

Wasn't quite sure how he was going to get back to the other side of the Cape, to collect his belongings, where he'd thrown up a part because there were only two "sides"—or maybe three—to it, instead of ten or more. An actor simply can't do himself justice, just speaking two sides. Or three.

I hope he was taken on; even if he got only four "sides."

Irish Name Given To Pet Dachshund

In the face of opposition from friends and family, Marion Lawrence—North Shore postdeb whose mother is present guardian of the deb list—is going to name her new black and tan dachshund puppy "Dinty Dennis."

She won a pile of money on a greyhound of that name, so arguments bend her decision not a whit—it is going to be Dinty Dennis, the Dachshund.

Dazed Fight Writers Will Concede Sharkey a Chance

Austen Lake

THE TIMES LACK LOGIC, and I suspect you will find that we prize-fight journalists, who shouted our opinions about Max Schmeling being a hollow husk before he fought Joe Louis, will be pretty hush-mouthed and mumbly in our predictions before the Sharkey-Louis fight next month.

We dwelt on the inhuman aspects of a match in which a man, and especially a decrepit shell of a man like Schmeling too, was exposed to the cold, lethal coils in Louis' muscles. And we went north to Napanoch to bury Schmeling, not to praise him, during his training fandango, which made him look like a clinical guinea pig.

When, to our mingled admiration and dismay, Schmeling raised a bruise big as a goiter on Joe's jaw with right and left hand busts and finally spilled him for the dread decade, we agreed that no journalist who covers prize fights, baseball or any other sport qualifies as a fortune teller. And, as the mailed abuse came flooding in during the ensuing week, we decided that any gent or lady reader who would go to the files and dig up our wrong guesses, was just no gent or lady at all.

Anyway, before the pale-eyed party pulls up his purple tights and stalks out to meet what, secretly, I still consider to be fistic fate in a brown skin, there will be a lot of editorial salt flung over our shoulders, lest we be forced to eat another mass of indigestible opinion.

EXPERTS STILL DAZED

IN THE ADVANCE PRESS COPY SHARKEY will be allowed a better chance than he deserves, though he would have been counted very brash indeed to be crawling into the same ring with Louis, if the experts had not seen what they saw on the night of June 18, which was a kind of worm's-eye view from the press rows of Louis squirming

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
14 BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JULY 22, 1936

BRADDOCK Accepts Challenge OF SCHMELING

New York, July 21 (US)—Max Schmeling buried his official challenge for the heavyweight boxing title across the Atlantic today and within an hour after it was spread on the records of the New York State Athletic Commission it was accepted by James J. Braddock.

Shortly after General John J. Phelan, commission chairman, rapped for order at the regular weekly open meeting he produced a cablegram from Germany.

"I do hereby officially challenge James J. Braddock" was the way Schmeling phrased his opening sentence, and he went on to say that Mike Jacobs, who has him under contract, would put up a forfeit if necessary.

Later Jacobs appeared before the commission with another cablegram authorizing him to act as agent. He handed over a certified check for $5000 in accordance with commission rules.

Within an hour Braddock's acceptance was also a matter of record. The heavyweight champion is training upstate, but his manager, Joe Gould, was conveniently near, though he had not been officially summoned. General Phelan had just stated:

"We will send a letter notifying Braddock that this commission approves Schmeling as the outstanding contender. Braddock will be allowed 15 days to reply. He must notify us by August 5 what he intends to do."

Before the commission stenographer could type the official notification, however, Gould walked in He as d:

"It's not necessary to write me or Braddock. In behalf of Braddock I accept any challenger named by this commission."

COAST Net Final LOOMS

By WALTER KILEY

Possibility of an All-California final looms in the Longwood Bowl men's singles.

Three West Coast players are still in the thick of the running as the competition enters the quarter-finals this afternoon.

Two of them, Walter Senior of San Francisco and Bobby Riggs of Los Angeles are red hot and possible semi-finalists in the upper bracket While the courageous Joe Hunt, Los Angeles tow-head, is dynamite in the bottom half.

It is no unsecure that any of the trio will survive into the finals, yet their play in the early matches makes them well worth watching.

Riggs has been the cynosure of all eyes through the publicity attendant his four fine showings since leaving his native haunts some weeks ago.

But the play of Senior and Hunt has not only been surprisingly fine but has bordered on the sensational.

The 27-year-old Senior is a veteran in years by comparison with his youthful Pacific rivals. Yet he has been active in big time competition little more than a year, climaxed by his victory in the California State championship this summer.

He has taken the measure of Robert Decker of Boston, Melvin Lapham of New York and the talented Henry Culley of Santa Monica to date. His latter victory was one of the two most spectacular battles of the week at Longwood Today Senior meets Wilmer Hines, defending champion. The match will be played on the championship enclosed court as the day's feature. It is set for 3 o'clock.

Riggs, who seems to rise to the occasion whenever he is seriously involved in trouble, plays Robert Harmon of New York at 2 p. m. and will have the favorite's rank-ing.

JAMAICA PLAIN MAN AT TOP OF LIST

Scores Two Aces In Same Day

Montreal, July 21 (AP) — Nick Brenner has accomplished a feat which equals if not surpasses the the wildest dreams of all hole-in-one club members, two aces in one day.

Yesterday morning Nick fired with his No. 7 iron on the 125-yard fifth hole at Wentworth Golf Club and rejoiced to see his tee shot roll into the cup. As the foursome came up to the same tee in their afternoon round Nick remarked:

"I'm going to to that again."

He did, and was just as astonished as his companions.

WILSON PICKS FIRETHORN

TURF KING AND HIS FOES

Wilson's Nod Goes to Firethorn

By DAVE WILSON

Firethorn in the $25,000 Massachusetts Handicap. That's my selection for the race today. Despite the presence of Discovery, Time Supply, Stand Pat and other great handicap stars, Firethorn can win and should win the mile and one-eighth classic.

Firethorn, a son of Sweeper, and Baton, is owned by Walter M. Jeffords and trained by Preston Burch, the greatest of all young trainers, to my mind.

He defeated Discovery a length last fall, and in the recent Suburban Handicap he gave Discovery and Whopper a proper pasting.

I like him especially because he has been quartered at the Fair Boston track for almost a month being prepped for this particular race by Burch. If the race were a mile and a quarter I'd be inclined with you to back the family jewels on his ability to win.

He is a slow beginner, but comes like a stream-lined train once he starts churning over a track. This race will be a mile and one-eighth, and if Firethorn is within reach of the leaders, he's destined to pick up the marbles.

Harry Richards, who has no peer as a race rider, has been engaged to pilot the son of Sweeper. Richards, under whom Firethorn almost joined the jock out of the saddle when he breezed a mile in 1:42 1 for his final workout Thursday, may run one of his best races ever, which would be enough to beat Discovery, Time Supply, Stand Pat and Good Gamble, who was third to Discovery and Whopper in the Suburban.

He worked a sparkling six furlongs in 1:14 4 last Sunday, and looked as good as any horse in the barn. Burch, who has been standing behind him all the way, couldn't restrain a few moments before the start and Stepson at Arlington Park, where he finished 3 in a 12-horse race won by Stand Pat.

It is a confession of weakness, too, that Good Gamble will also be a Vanderbilt starter, for in the old days he needed no help from anybody.

Time Supply should be right in the thick of things. "Sonny" Workman is coming on to ride him. He is nicely weighted at 121 pounds and his final was a mile and an eighth in 1:52.4 handily.

So there are my selections for the Massachusetts Handicap: 1—Firethorn, 2—Discovery, 3—Time Supply.

ANN PICKS BLACK GIFT

By ANN MARSTERS

Black Gift—a little orphan horse—is running today. He's running in the Massachusetts handicap against bigger and more famous horses.

These horses, the big and famous ones, don't know very much about Black Gift. They won't be worrying. They may even look down their noses a little and give a superior snort.

But once they start running—they had better watch out for little Black Gift. And there are reasons why.

In the first place, he's carrying only 104 pounds. That's just 23 pounds less than Discovery is toting.

In the second place, he's being ridden by Mack Garner, one of the oldest jockeys in active service. Garner was Cavalcade's jockey. He rode him two years ago when Cavalcade beat Discovery seven times out of seven times.

Those aren't the only reasons why the "big shots" had better watch out. For Black Gift has run against as good a field as today's—and he has won.

Last Spring, in the Philadelphia Handicap at Havre de Grace, Black Gift was a mere outsider. He surprised everyone by beating two great horses, Cycle and Stand Pat. Now you should be reminded that on the Fourth of July at Arlington Downs, Stand Pat beat Discovery and Whopper.

Not so many years ago, before Black Gift was born, a man named Leon Carter found a neglected, half-starved horse wasting away in a stall. Carter nursed the horse back to health and strength. Then Carter put a saddle on the horse and rode him in a few races.

When Black Gift was a 2-year-old Carter leased him to Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane who owns the Brookmeade stable. Mack Garner was her stable jockey, then and rode Black Gift when the little horse won his first race.

Garner and Black Gift should make a great team today. Even though I am not particularly for horses over that distance, I'm willing to bet that Black Gift will be right up there at the finish.

What he has done before, he may do again. So watch out!

P. S.—Anyway, I'm picking him to win.

Lt. Greenock Best Bet at Downs

(Selections for East Track)

BEST—LT. GREENOCK, 4TH

Suffolk Downs, July 22—A. G. Tarms' Lt. Greenock, winner of his last start galloping, looms as the safest hazard of the eight-race card here today.

Lt. Greenock should lead homestretch the field down to contest the fourth heat, a six furlong sprint for three-year-olds and upward

FIRST RACE

Brophy, Teeter Totter, Sir Kal BROPHY, pitted too high on last trip, needs only to tone back to brisk morning trials in order to lead this less capable field. TEETER TOTTER seconds to Jim John, figures real close on the strength of that race. Could endeavor. SIR KAI merits better than a fighting chance on his 2nd

SECOND RACE

Geologist, Askaris, Daddy's Boy GEOLOGIST must have a winning fast track. It has two starts over a slow track ahead of a comparable field. Is the choice. ASKARIS will be close up to drub in the event of mire. She's a five-star muddier. DADDY'S BOY figures close on recent good races.

THIRD RACE

Lady Hockberger, Gay Crest, Jim John

FOURTH RACE

Lt. Greenock, Appealing, Black Highbrow

LT. GREENOCK will have APPEALING to down for major honors. The latter stepped six furlongs in 1.11 2-5 to win pulled up from smart company only a few days back. BLACK HIGHBROW also won last in highly commendable fashion.

SIXTH RACE.

Savings, Druil Story, Re-election

Just can't pass up SAVINGS after searching for the right opportunity has been closing fast. Has always appeared to need a race. DRUIL STORY, pitted too amazingly in her recent races figures to improve enough to give the place from RE-ELECTION.

SEVENTH RACE

Newgrove, Polo Bar, Thatch

Bringing along with NEWGROVE in this wide open affair. Timed last and only effort was heaps better than the cold dope reveals. POLO BAR holds some chips, but has been away since Narragansett. THATCH is a possibility on best races.

EIGHTH RACE

Curb Bit, Flowery Lady, Thiswas

CURB BIT, closing like a thunderbolt, just missed getting up to drop Prince Pompey and Mountain Elk last time. FLOWERY LADY beaten by a whisker by Happy Easter last trip, looms all over the main danger. THISWAY is descending the scale. May come up the good thing.

Bruising Battle Looms at Arena

Tom Sharkey, one of the greatest fighters in boxing history, makes his bow here as a referee when Fred Bruno and Art Flynn collide in the main bout of the wrestling show tonight at the air-cooled Boston Arena.

The Flynn-Bruno two out of three falls, without a time limit, looms as one of the wildest brawls in wrestling annals.

Flynn and Bruno clash in a "revenge" match. While Flynn was refereeing recently he became entangled with Bruno and threw him out of the ring.

Sharkey, a standout referee on the coast, was brought on here to officiate in the match because Tom is quite a referee, packing plenty of authority in his fists despite his 63 years and because the promotmakers felt Sharkey would be an added attraction.

Collyer's Comment

FIRETHORN—This splendid racer, given a special preparation, is my selection for the $75,000 Massachusetts handicap—one and one-eighth miles—at Suffolk Downs.

True, the "great" DISCOVERY (and he really is a great horse) is in there with the pick of honor, and coupled with GOOD GAMBLER, ruled a 6 to 5 favorite overnight. STAND PAT was in neatly with 119 pounds. Also he favors this course, while TIME SUPPLY, which won very impressively last time, and who never looked or acted better in his life, must also be seriously considered.

Then comes CLANG, a recent winner at Empire. All things considered, it must be admitted, the handicapper has done his work well, and a race worth going miles to see should result. I am making it FIRETHORN, TIME SUPPLY, STAND PAT and the VANDERBILT ENTRY fourth. If perchance you need a bit of lagniappe I suggest a look-see at BOBS BOYS old beezer. Ye wekrum.

At Arlington

At Empire

MR. SHIPS is dropped into a real snug spot in the fourth at Empire. Adios, hasta mañana.

U. S. Team In Germany Saturday

By DAVIS J. WALSH

Aboard S S Manhattan, July 22 (UNS)—The anti-Berlin movement that caused disruption in Olympic ranks for more than a year, was mysteriously renewed today on the eve of the American team's arrival in Germany.

Pamphlets protesting against America's participation under the swastika are being left in the athletes' tourist quarters, presumably by someone traveling tourist, but the propaganda is left late at night when cabin class is separated from the tourists.

The ship's personnel, however, hasn't been asked to keep watch for anti-Nazi, and inquiry indicated that the entire incident is being contedly ignored by all hands.

After halts at Cobh, Ireland, and Plymouth, England, yesterday, and at Le Havre, France, today, all of which interfered with practice, sessions are now occupied with preparations for the arrival at Hamburg late tomorrow and debarkation early Friday.

The party will rush to Berlin for its first land workout Saturday afternoon following the German metropolis of Hamburg.

Chief Coach Lawson Robertson found it necessary today to warn the athletes to take their lionizing easy. They are anxious and eager to run, he said, "and may do themselves more harm than good unless they are restrained."

Don Lash of Indiana and other distance runners, for instance, are impatient and need workouts badly. Lash is endlessly walking around the decks, and to the same tune of Glenn Cunningham and Archie San Romani. Jesse Owens continues to recover from his cold and is working every day. Coaches told Frank Wykoff to "tuck in his chin" at the finish of a sprint, for his head is otherwise too high.

East Boston Game

The Star of the Sea nine of East Boston will entertain the Sacred Heart Club of Roslindale in their final Catholic League game tonight at Noyes Park, Orient Heights, East Boston.

Berlin Travel Tips Given by Shirer

By WILLIAM SHIRER
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

Berlin, July 22—Here are a few pointers for Americans coming to Germany for the 11th Olympic games to be held here from August 1 to 16.

German visas will be issued free of charge to all those in possession of a stadium pass or tickets to the games.

Registered marks cannot be used to pay for tickets, but may be used for all other expenses during the games. The usual allotment of 50 registered marks per day per person during the games. Registered marks must be purchased outside Germany, or sent in from outside. The most convenient form is to buy them in America in the form of mark traveller's checks.

The average number of daily visitors to Berlin during the games has been estimated by the Olympic authorities at 150,000. Berlin hotels possess 30,000 beds, of which 8500 are in first class hotels. Of the 30,000 beds, half of them are required by the normal traffic, leaving 15,000 available for visitors to the Olympics, of which 2000 have been requisitioned for "official visitors," leaving 13,000 for the others coming here for the games.

The remaining 137,000 visitors will be taken care of in private houses. Typical Prussian methods have ensured that there will be enough rooms for all, that they will be spick and span, that the service will be good and that above all there will be no overcharging. Anyone who overcharges is liable to find himself the next day in a Nazi concentration camp.

The private rooms will be available in apartments situated in the more or less fashionable West End, which is near to the Reich's sport field where the games take place. This section is also near the Kurfurstendamm center of Berlin night life, scene of countless outdoor cafe terraces and the most pleasant section of the capital with its wide, tree-studded avenues and smart shops. The center of Berlin can be reached from there in a few minutes by bus, subway and electric railway.

The rooms in private houses will be concentrated in 21 "Olympic colonies." Most of the apartments are in the modern German style. For the convenience of foreign guests unfamiliar with the German language each "colony" will have an administration office with plenty of interpreters for all.

The rooms in private rooms will be 6, 4.50 and 3 marks per day, depending on the location and the room. This price includes service but not breakfast, bath—and of course not meals, of which there will be a plentiful supply of the best German quality available at all hours.

All rooms and the families who own them have been carefully investigated by an army of Olympic or Nazi officials and no one can rent a room who has not been approved by the authorities.

(Next Installment: Travel costs reduced for Olympic visitors.)

Yankee Winner Of Second Race

Newport, R. I., July 22—A scant 19 seconds separated Gerard B. Lambert's sloop Yankee, the winner, and Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow, the runner-up, in the second race of the series of this port.

The Yankees covered the 30-mile course from Brenton's Reef lightship to Block Island and back in 4 hours 15 minutes 47 seconds. Rainbow's time was 4 16 44 and Westamoe crossed the finish line in 4 22 35.

Roslindale Team In Rare Form

Bill Bailey's Roslindale Town club showed by its grand 21-2 victory over Kennedy's last night in the opening round of the Boston Park League playoffs that it will be very much in the running before the final gong is sounded.

Undaunted by the appearance of the storemen's ace, Frank Lucas on the mound, the Roslindale boys played smart ball and hit with them on bases to drive him from the mound early, while going on to have a big seven-run second inning after opening with a cocked hat of tallies.

Jordan's, the defending champs, after a 7-2 victory over the Madden's, will play the Roxbury salon's team at Marcella street tonight, with McDermott or Collingwood due to take the hill against Soggy Regan.

Dick Casey, one up on the St. Lazarus nine by virtue of the 4-1 victory at East Boston last night, will be at home at Garvey Field in Neponset, anxious to make it two straight wins.

Wolf's will send Dick Quigley or Tom Whelan after the Hemlen's at Fallon Field after winning 9-6 behind Jim Shea last night at Jefferson Field.

Seattle Wins

Farmingdale, N. Y., July 22 (UR)—Pruning four strokes from the record of 603 made by Los Angeles two years ago, a sweetly synchronized quartet from Seattle won the public links team championship and thereby inherited for the duration of one year the Warren G. Harding Cup.

Horse Prices Boom

By JACK CONWAY

SPEAKING of news: With Discovery and Good Gamble in the $25,000 Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs today, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt is looking ahead to future racing seasons. He has just closed a deal for 11 yearlings at a cost of $25,000.

Bud Stotler, Vanderbilt's trainer, told me the price of yearlings is booming.

"There is today a spot for every thoroughbred with so much racing," said Stotler. "This is why the price of yearlings is increasing. One of the yearlings which we got from a breeding farm in Kentucky cost $7500.

Mr. Boston

"I am not interested in a yearling unless it has good breeding. Unless a horse has a history of good racing behind it, there is little chance of it winning.

"There is a great demand for horses today. Take my experience with Black Toreador. It was claimed by A. McDonnell for $2500. Before the race I had agreed to sell Black Toreador to another party for the same amount in the event he was not claimed.

"We are looking for another Discovery and may eventually get one."

Jack Sharkey

JACK Sharkey says he will do his early training for his bout with Joe Louis in Boston.

"I weighed 214 pounds when I returned from my vacation in New Hampshire," said Sharkey. "I now weigh 206 pounds after a few days in the gym. I shall be under 200 pounds when I clash with Louis at the Yankee Stadium on August 18.

"I shall continue to train in Boston until two weeks before the bout when I shall go to a camp outside of New York. I always feel better when training near home which is why I wish to remain in Boston as long as possible."

I asked Sharkey how he looked upon the Louis bout.

"It is a natural step in my come-back campaign," said Sharkey. "If I win from Louis, and I am confident I shall do so, I shall be the logical opponent to meet the winner of the Schmeling-Braddock bout.

"I think I proved in my bout with Phil Brubaker that I can step 10 rounds on high. I was going faster than Brubaker in the last five rounds of our bout. When Phil tried to rally in the last two sessions, I made him back up.

"Louis will have a big mental hazard when he faces me. He will be wondering if he can take a punch on the jaw as a result of his knockout at the hands of Schmeling. If I belt Joe on the chin early with a heavy right-hand thump, the 'Bomber' will have plenty of cause for worry."

O'Mahony

I RECEIVED a radiogram from Jack McGrath, manager of Danno O'Mahony, in which he reveals he has signed the Irishman to wrestle the best available opponent in Dublin on August 8. McGrath and O'Mahony are passengers on the Scythia which sailed from Boston for Ireland last Saturday night.

Danno will go direct to his home at Ballydehob upon his arrival in Ireland.

QUINN Plans New DEAL

By JOE CASHMAN

There must be a lot of wailing and gnashing of teeth among National League rivals in general and the Brooklyn Dodgers in particular as they note the pitching Ben Cantwell is doing for the Bees.

One of the most effective flingers in the loop all season, Bill McKechnie's veteran right-handed ace is still Boston property only because seven other clubs out-smarted themselves last winter.

Any foe could have acquired Ben during the off season for a Class B rookie and a good bat boy. None would have him. His 1935 record of 25 defeats, the most charged to any pitcher, and only four wins scared them all away. They overlooked the fact that he had the best earned run average of any Braves boxman; forgot he had turned in 20 victories as recently as 1933.

Mr. Cantwell today owns eight triumphs, has the highest percentage of any of the regular Bees' boxmen and appears to have more stuff than ever before in his long career.

The Dodgers management in return for giving the Bees such stellar performers as Tony Cuccinello, Gene Moore, Al Lopez, Ray Benge, Bobby Reis et al, was given its choice of the native flingers.

The Flatbush strategy board picked Fred Frankhouse and Ed Brandt. In fact, it wouldn't have done any dealing unless it received these two flingers. It wouldn't consider Cantwell.

At this writing, Ben has more triumphs than his two former mates combined and the Dodgers sent here have transformed the Bees from also-rans into first division contenders.

Cantwell sought his ninth victory as the McKechniemen ushered in their 12-day home-stay in the opener of a four-game series with the Cincinnati Reds. He didn't succeed, but it wasn't exactly his fault that he dropped a 3 to 2 decision to Benny Frey, an old Red Sox discard.

It was the second heart-breaking defeat suffered by Cantwell in as many starts. Last Thursday out in Chicago he was beaten by the Cubs, 1 to 0, in ten innings.

In the second game of the series this p. m. Jim "Tiny" Chaplin will stroll to the Bees' hill to duel with Paul Derringer, ace of the Reds' staff.

Having won 11 out of 14 games from the Rhinelanders up to the start of this engagement, the McKechniemen figure that perhaps they had the Tuesday setback coming to them, but they don't think the hostiles can stop them again on this visit.

Immediately after the game, Manager Bill McKechnie went into a huddle with Bob Quinn and the pair still had their heads together as the shades of night fell.

These Bees' bosses have their hearts set on grabbing off a first-division berth and are constantly on the hunt for players who might aid in the quest.

Neither would mention the names of any players sought, but it wouldn't surprise this envoy if one of these days they announced that they had acquired Guy Bush, former Cubs' mound mainstay who was given his unconditional release by the Pirates a few days back.

Bush couldn't get anybody out for the Bucs but he might stage a miracle comeback as have Cantwell and so many others for Master McKechnie.

| 3 | Lucky Sahara | 70 | E. McGinnis | 7-1 |
| 1 | Shy Ann | 53 | William Baker | 8-1 |
| 5 | Pepper Red | 67 | John Allen | 8-1 |
| 6 | Silver Sand | 54 | F. C. Lawman | 10-1 |

MISS LYNN, running in much improved form recently, earns top rating here off two last efforts. Pup ran very greenly several times but is rapidly progressing and should soon graduate into better company. DON J., in the money three of four previous starts, should be factor with SMOKY getting up for show. Latter has had poor racing luck to date and may have trouble breaking from the five hole. FINAL JACK likely to better last, having drawn an inside post.

SECOND RACE—FUTURITY

| P.P. | Dogs | Wt. | Owner | Odds |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 7 | Juan Rose | 57 | J. D. Hall | 6-1 |
| 5 | Windy Breeze | 64 | Geo. Lippold, Jr. | 5-1 |
| 1 | Bitter Creek | 60 | H. Highhouse | 5-1 |
| 6 | Winged Bullet | 63 | J. L. Keenan | 7-1 |
| 8 | Music Mad | 56 | H. E. Alderson | 7-1 |
| 4 | Meadow Chief | 67 | F. C. Lawman | 8-1 |
| 2 | Bingo | 65 | Glenwood Ken. | 8-1 |
| 3 | Tu Wey | 67 | Jess Bingham | 12-1 |

JUAN ROSE well-backed in several of its previous races, has another chance to win against a fairly cheap lot. Pup is well-placed to take it all and has little to beat. WINDY BREEZE, despite poor position, likely to furnish the main contention. BITTER CREEK has shown enough speed to maintain an in-the-money position throughout from the one hole. MUSIC MAD better than two previous. Others haven't shown much.

THIRD RACE—5-16 MILE
OUT POST, FIDDLESTICKS, RINGING BREEZE

| P.P. | Dogs | Wt. | Owner | Odds |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 8 | Out Post | 68 | J. W. Ewalt | 4-1 |
| 4 | Fiddlesticks | 72 | Sid Manor | 5-1 |
| 7 | Ringing Breeze | 64 | Geo. Lippold, Jr. | 5-1 |
| 6 | Miss Claremore | 52 | L. E. Thompson | 6-1 |
| 1 | Skimalong | 66 | Jess Bingham | 7-1 |
| 5 | Jimmy Fox | 62 | J. D. Hall | 8-1 |
| 3 | Rock Roll | 76 | J. A. Austin | 10-1 |
| 2 | Pepper Roll | 62 | Glenwood Ken. | 8-1 |

OUT POST, winner of two previous starts against better company, is the logical selection here. Pup won against fifth race competition and then was advanced a notch where he won again. Breaking from the eight box, OUT POST should be up with the leaders throughout. FIDDLESTICKS is a very game contender and will argue all the way. RINGING BREEZE'S Saturday night victory came easy. Dog should be at home in a route race.

FOURTH RACE—FUTURITY
JOHN J., FLORA DAY, BE A STAR

| P.P. | Dogs | Wt. | Owner | Odds |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 4 | John J. | 63 | L. Thompson | 4-1 |
| 1 | Flora Day | 51 | Sarah R. Allan | 5-1 |
| 5 | Be a Star | 65 | C. R. Findlater | 5-1 |
| 2 | Glammire | 57 | D. Callaghan | 6-1 |
| 8 | Platinum | 60 | J. W. Ewalt | 7-1 |
| 6 | Junfite | 62 | H. E. Alderson | 8-1 |
| 7 | Pyramid | 64 | Foxhill Kennel | 9-1 |
| 3 | Gangster's Lish | 61 | Glenwood Ken. | 12-1 |

JOHN J., in trouble on the 14th, looks like the one to beat here off previous race form. Veteran futurity runner has not been in the money frequently, but should do well against these. FLORA DAY won the only start against cheaper ones, but merits a chance here on account of post position. BE A STAR, erratic and speedy, is a mild possibility. Others have run well occasionally but are inconsistent.

FIFTH RACE—5-16 MILE
ANNA BREEZE, DOROTHY JEAN, JUST ALLIE

| P.P. | Dogs | Wt. | Owner | Odds |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 5 | Anna Breeze | 51 | G. Lippold, Jr. | 4-1 |
| 7 | Dorothy Jean | 53 | Dennis Allen | 5-1 |
| 8 | Just Allie | 55 | Crescent Ken. | 6-1 |
| 6 | Sky | 63 | Freda Koontz | 6-1 |
| 1 | Dany Grey | 62 | J. W. Ewalt | 7-1 |
| 4 | Andromyy | 55 | E. Boyle | 8-1 |
| 3 | Beda | 52 | H. E. Alderson | 8-1 |
| 2 | Just An Argum't | 76 | John Peack | 10-1 |

ANNA BREEZE, class dog in the race, met a serious interference last ... should be ... out. DOROTHY JEAN ... capable of ... JUST ALLIE has been very ... on occasions. SKY has won but once in 14, so rates little chance.

SIXTH RACE—FUTURITY
LASSIE CUTLET, GOLDEN VIXEN, DIGHTON

| P.P. | Dogs | Wt. | Owner | Odds |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | Lassie Cutlet | 52 | S. B. Cox | 4-1 |
| 6 | Golden Vixen | 53 | J. A. Austin | 5-1 |
| 2 | Dighton | 58 | D. Callaghan | 5-1 |
| 4 | Fulton's Choice | 62 | Gus Males | 7-1 |
| 7 | Gangster's Boy | 60 | Crescent Ken. | 8-1 |
| 8 | Creek Rock | 65 | William Baker | 9-1 |
| 5 | Art Desperate | 67 | Arch De Geer | 8-1 |
| 3 | Jovial Son | 67 | F. C. Lawman | 10-1 |

LASSIE CUTLET, winner over cheaper company on Saturday, moves up the class ladder tonight but can't be overlooked because of post position. Form suggests that pup can break fast and should be up with leaders throughout. GOLDEN VIXEN is on the improve. DIGHTON has run well.

SEVENTH RACE—FUTURITY
SPEEDY EVENT, CHIEF'S DARLING, CHINK

| P.P. | Dogs | Wt. | Owner | Odds |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 2 | Speedy Event | 64 | Gus Males | 4-1 |
| 3 | Chief's Darling | 50 | Mrs. Failing | 5-1 |
| 8 | Chink | 53 | H. E. Alderson | 5-1 |
| 1 | Touchdown | 63 | Dennis Allen | 6-1 |
| 6 | Ridge Band | 63 | D. Leahy | 7-1 |
| 4 | Tailspin Breeze | 60 | Geo. Lippold Jr. | 8-1 |
| 7 | Mutton Roll | 58 | J. A. Austin | [illegible] |

SPEEDY EVENT ... recent ... over the Revere ... the one to beat here ... with the leaders in early going ... interference. CHIEF'S DARLING'S recent victory was from the three hole, suggesting possibility pup might turn the trick when placed there again. CHINK, speedy and a factor. TOUCHDOWN class of the race, but has shown little.

EIGHTH RACE—5/16 MILE
RISKY LEADER, MARY ELIZABETH, THE MOTORMAN

| P.P. | Dogs | Wt. | Owner | Odds |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 7 | Risky Leader | 64 | L. W. Randall | 5-2 |
| 7 | Mary Elizabeth | 57 | J. A. Austin | 7-2 |
| 2 | The Motorman | 62 | Bud Sunday | 13-5 |
| 6 | Frank Lonergan | 76 | Jess Bingham | 7-1 |
| 5 | Big Laddie | 77 | F. W. Jones | 8-1 |
| 3 | Lady Blondell | 60 | Art Wilson | 8-1 |
| 4 | Police Court | 60 | Dan Oswald | 8-1 |
| 8 | Country Doctor | 66 | D. Callaghan | 12-1 |

RISKY LEADER, off 28 3 performance previous out, may go to the post an odds on favorite despite high class competition in this race is certain to provide ... MARY ELIZABETH may have trouble getting into the contention in such a ... THE MOTORMAN likely to take ... Others all have good chances. ... likely to decide.

NINTH RACE—FUTURITY
EFFIE M., BULL HEFNER, BROWN SUGAR

| P.P. | Dogs | Wt. | Owner | Odds |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | Effie M. | 55 | R. F. Randle | 4-1 |
| 2 | Bull Hefner | 67 | Glenwood Ken. | 5-1 |
| 4 | Brown Sugar | 61 | Sid Manor | 5-1 |
| 7 | Speedy Lad | 68 | Jess Bingham | 6-1 |
| 3 | Miss Teaf Court | 58 | Dan Oswald | 7-1 |
| 5 | Ben Officer | 62 | L. W. Randall | 8-1 |
| 6 | Public Enemy | 72 | Art Wilson | 8-1 |
| 8 | Big Friend | 72 | F. W. Jones | 10-1 |

EFFIE M. well placed to ... this company ... BROWN SUGAR ... won the race. Latter is a ... fast breaker and a fast pace setter ... has faced ... BULL HEFNER deserves consideration off recent efforts. BIG FRIEND might surprise ... a good ... shot.

TENTH RACE—5-16 MILE
TRULY BAD, LORD LISTER, LIKE LADDIE

| P.P. | Dogs | Wt. | Owner | Odds |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 4 | Truly Bad | 64 | Freda Koontz | 4-1 |
| 3 | Lord Lister | 65 | H. Highhouse | 4-1 |
| 8 | Like Laddie | 68 | Jess Bingham | 5-1 |
| 6 | Red Roll | 74 | J. A. Austin | 6-1 |
| 1 | Just a Bear | 76 | John Peack | 7-1 |
| 2 | Pepper Andrew | 61 | N. G. Allen | 8-1 |
| 5 | My Fashion | 63 | F. W. Jones | 8-1 |
| 7 | Whiskey Point | 64 | Dennis Allen | 10-1 |

A beaten prize fighter is always a discredited prize fighter, both in the eyes of the public and the technical experts, who think and see these things similarly. It was that way when Sharkey won a foul decision from Harry Wills, the bout in which he established his reputation in 1926. The rule against hitting and holding was especially revived for that evening only, though many prize fighters have done the same thing since Wills' time and nobody has been ruled out of a main event in New York since that night.

But when the referee pinioned Wills' arms, a little shamefacedly I thought, and motioned him to his corner, Sharkey was deemed to have removed a grave menace to the white supremacy and Wills was suddenly hailed as an imposter and a fistic sheep in a wolf's clothing.

10 ROUNDS; A SHARKEY CONFESSION

IT WAS THAT WAY AGAIN WHEN LOUIS came unhinged and a portion of the press, which had previously screamed his glory, began to revile him as a timid schoolboy with a plaster chin who had imposed on the public for a year and a half. And it was amazing how many citizens suddenly turned up who boasted they had foreseen the outcome and had fattened their purses at 12 to 1. Though the only actual Schmeling money that I saw was the $300 flaunted by Max's own cook, a chunky German who sent down his life savings and asked to have them covered at a canny 15 to 1. Which it was, in a greedy scramble among the fight tourists in the main camp.

It is suggested sportingly that Sharkey backers come forth and register their wagers before the big business is pulled so that they be entitled to squeal ridicule in case Jack, with his round house right, performs another miracle. No doubt some of the chronic short enders will chance their cash on the fact that Jack beat a faster and better boxer in Phil Brubaker than Schmeling is, though not so stiff a puncher. And that Jack is fighting 10 rounds instead of the regulation 15, though the fact that Jack insisted on the shorter distance is a confession in itself.

CUSTOMERS STILL CURIOUS

THE PEOPLE WHO WILL CROWD INTO THE Yankee Stadium on August 18 will come out of curiosity to see what effect the Schmeling licking will have on the Negro boy and whether, if one of Sharkey's gloves catches him flush on the lug, he will again go into the spaghetti-legged wobble and stand swaying drunkenly, as he did after Schmeling tagged him in the fourth round.

It will always remain one of the mysteries of the prize ring history to me, why, if one punch imparted a rubbery-kneed delirium to Louis, why the barrage of other punches which rained on his button, didn't bring him crashing down before the 12th. But Louis just stayed there, lurching and eating leather beyond any conception that the human frame could absorb such punishment.

It was amazing that he could go dizzy so suddenly and remain vertical so long. And when, finally he did go under the ether, he first took a sleepy look toward his corner for any last message from Jack Blackburn before submerging in slumber and I think, if he had deemed the game worth the candle, he could, even then, have risen and soaked up some more.

The people will swarm to see if Sharkey can land a haymaker and put his man under upright anesthesia. And at the popular prices of $10 ringside to $2 under the roof, it is possible, win or lose, that Sharkey will haul away some $50,000 for his end. Which is not bad for an antiquated fighter who laid himself in his professional tomb three years ago and came back to fistic life out of sheer boredom.

Winchester Golf

Monahan, Brown Team at Peak

By BILL GRIMES

Although the Winchester Country Club annual four ball invitation field does not measure up to those of the past, there are enough topnotch combinations in the championship flight to offer the usual high grade brand of competition.

Judge Joseph W. Monahan and Leo Brown, Sandy Burr, who were the medalists of yesterday's qualifying round with a sub par better ball of 68, are playing J. M. Abbott and Clarence "Kid" Cochrane in the first round this morning.

Both Judge Monahan and Leo Brown are at the peak of their games and they'll be tough to beat at least until the field is culled down to the semifinalists. Their first round opponents, Abbott and Cochrane, just got under the wire with a 78 to qualify in the first division.

Arthur V. Rogers, Jr. and Ellis Gates, who were the runners-up to Monahan and Brown with a 69 were seeded in the lower half of the draw, and were drawn to open the drive for the championship against John Joy and Bill Chamberlain, who are making their debuts in Winchester championship flights.

Bill Speers, Jr., and Sears Walker, who were 71 yesterday, are playing Harold V. Kaler, Charles River and J. J. Collins, Bear Hill. Speers and Walker were one of the four seeded combinations, and with little on his mind but his golf this morning, Speers, who is a member of the golf committee and therefore had a thousand and one things to do before playing his qualifying round, will give the Charles River-Bear Hill team something to shoot at during the opening round.

Jesse P. Guilford and Eddie Lowery were seeded in the lower half of the draw. They had a better ball of 72 yesterday and are expected to step through Don and L. S. Martin without a great deal of trouble. In fact, Guilford and Lowery are the outstanding team in the tourney.

The Paul Simons-Charlie Eaton combination will bear watching. They were 73 yesterday and should shoot better golf today in match play. Eaton, who is a former state junior champion, has not been playing regularly this season but if he manages to get through a couple of rounds, he'll be hard to eliminate with the assistance he'll receive from his partner.

Stan Taylor, Oyster Harbors, the new junior champion, is playing with Phil Hendrick, the veteran whose golf apparently has taken on a new lease of life. Taylor and Hendrick were drawn to play R. Reugeluth and F. W. Young in the first round and should come through with a win.

Civic Pride

Local Boy Is Good

By DAVE EGAN

Down in Newport, there is dancing in the square, and there are drinks on the house, and the old duffers are wiping off their golf tools and taking practice swipes at imaginary daisies, for they have found a golfer in their midst.

The last great stir of civic pride, down in Newport, was when Chick Suggs went out to challenge the world in the featherweight division, and just missed hitting the top of the heap, more because of his color than because of any lack of natural ability.

Dave Egan

Now, of all things, they are agog and atwitter about a golfer. When I was an apple-cheeked boy down there, we used to yell "Yoo hoo" at all golfers, and question their sanity in most unsanitary English, and call them Percival, but times have changed, even in what seems to be changeless Newport.

The golfer is Johnny Burke, and he is strictly a home product. In the winter, he shoots a cute game of pool against all comers, and murders the pins in his father's pool alley, and when spring comes, he walks out on the links and shoots just as good a game of golf.

Three in Row

He is a rusty-haired kid who has won the State amateur championship three years in succession, which is a record for Rhode Island. Now Master Burke has reached the advanced age of 19, and next week, up in Portland, will reach out for the New England amateur title.

The year before last, when he won the State championship for the first time, the fathers of the Newport Country Club refused to invite him to participate against Max Marston and the other crack amateurs who take part in their annual affair, for he was a freckled boy in short pants at the time, and the Newport Country Club was very hoity-toity indeed.

There was an enraged howl from the citizens of Newport, who are always demanding their rights, and some of my cousins, who are notorious for their ability to heave a paving brick accurately, were all for going to the Country Club and heaving bricks squarely through the windows.

Cooler heads prevailed, however, and my cousins, who are practically the entire population of Newport, were mollified a year ago when the fathers of the Newport Country Club invited Johnny, a trifle loftily, to take part in the tourney.

He made the high-priced amateurs from New York and the rest of the country look like a lot of seedy bums before he lost in the finals to Tommy Goodwin, the Metropolitan champion.

Only one unfortunate incident marked the play of the final match. The entire town had turned out to watch Johnny beat the city slicker and they were ... the ... when suddenly ... ball was lost.

Loses Ball

Thousands joined in the search for it, because, in golf, a lost ball = a lost hole, and Johnny, at that point, could not afford to lose a hole. It was a tight, close-fisted match.

One of our local citizens, I am sorry to report, had picked up the ball, meandered down the meadow some 50 yards, dropped it down his pants leg, and then bellowed at the referee, "Hey, empire, I got it!"

So Johnny Burke, a magnificent 18 deliberately flubbed his next young sportsman even at the age of shot, and flubbed himself out of the match which meant so much to him.

Follow the Ball!

Reader Did and It Landed Him in Red Hot Adventure

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

I got a letter the other day from a boy named Billy. Billy says he's 12 years old, and that he's lived in Boston most all his life, and that's he's never had an adventure.

He says that kids in the city don't have a chance to become adventurers like kids in the country do.

Well, Billy, that's all nonsense. It's the same thing, I suppose, that kids in the country are saying about kids in the city. All you've got to do is wait for an adventure. It'll come. And the chances are that you won't like it when you get it.

And just to show Billy how it's done, I'm going to tell you, today, the story of little Joe La Marca of New York City. Does that sound like the country to you, Billy? Nope. I'll give you my word that there isn't a cow pasture within five miles of there. And did you ever play baseball, Billy? Well, Joe La Marca did and he followed the ball right smack into one of the most hair-raising adventures any kid—city kid or country kid—ever had in his life.

The date was July 25, 1932, a hot summer day, and swell weather for ball playing. The scene was the street out in front of Joe La Marca's home. And the story opens up with a home run. One of the kids took a swing at the ball and connected. The ball rose high in the air in one of those long, looping flies. It came down again on top of a row of five-story houses, and while the runner went ambling around the bases, Joe La Marca started up toward the roof to get the old pill back so the game could go on.

A couple of other boys followed him, but Joe got there first. There were five or six houses in that row, all the same height. A low dividing wall separated each roof from the next one, and Joe began hopping over these in his quest for the ball. He hopped over one—two—three, but still no ball. He was just hopping over the fourth, when he realized that that was the last one—that on the other side of it there was no roof, but only a drop of five stories to the courtyard between one row of houses and the next!

Joe was already in the air when he realized that. It was too late to turn back! He reached out with his hands and caught the edge of the wall, but his grip wasn't strong and he knew he couldn't hold on there very long. He could hear other kids on the roof running toward him, and for a minute he thought everything was going to be all right. But before they reached him a terrible thing happened. The whole section of wall to which he was hanging began to move. Suddenly it toppled over the edge of the roof and, Joe under it, went hurtling toward the ground.

For a brief instant Joe had visions of himself lying smashed and bleeding on the hard pavement of the court with that big hunk of masonry on top of him. But the section of wall fell faster than Joe did. He saw it move on past him and then something brought him up with a jolt. It was a clothes line—one of five stretched across the courtyard from windows on each floor. Joe grabbed for the line, but just as he caught it it broke!

From sheer instinct, Joe kept his grip on that broken rope. He swung down and inward—smashed against the side of the building—and the jar broke his grip. Again he was falling. Already he had passed the fourth floor clothesline and the one on the third floor was coming up at him. It hit him squarely in the middle of the back. He bounced up once, and came down astraddle of the line. That line didn't break. A new family had moved into that third-floor apartment just a few days before. They had put up a new clothesline, and it held.

"I got hold of the line with my hands," Joe says, "and held on with all my might. I was scared to death. I thought the rope might break at any minute, and the ones below might not be as strong as this one. I looked over to the other side of the court where the line was attached to the fire-escape, but it was a long ways over. On the other side the rope was attached to a pole, and that was a lot nearer. I began to work my way toward it, hand over hand."

It was tough work. Three stories above the ground, and Joe was still jittery with fear, and weak from the shock of the last minute's experiences. The clothesline swayed and the pole it was attached to wobbled until Joe thought it was going to break. At last he got to the pole, clung there a moment while he got his breath and let his nerves calm down, and then he began a slow, careful descent.

Joe finally got to the bottom of that pole. He didn't go back and play ball, though. People were staring at him from half the windows in the house across the way, and all Joe wanted was to sneak out of there and get to some place where nobody could see him. He ran around the block to his own house.

But when he got there, the news had already gone on ahead of him. "Joey," said his mother, "did a boy fall off the roof?" And Joe told her the whole story, leaving out only one unimportant detail. He didn't tell his ma that he was the boy.

Well, the secret's out now. I hope Joe's ma if she reads this doesn't give Joe a licking for playing around on rooftops. But if she does—well—Joe will have ten bucks to sort of console him.

Tomorrow Anna MacCallum of Somerville tells how she ran the Death Gauntlet down the streets of Wakefield.

Doug Fairbanks Busy With New Company

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright 1936, by Universal Service

Doug has taken the first steps toward the formation of Douglas Fairbanks Productions, Inc. Once he has a business manager, two directors and a technical staff on contract he will produce his first picture, which will NOT be "Marco Polo."

Louella O Parsons

The first Douglas Fairbanks, Inc., movie is to be a Western, based on a story which has been simmering in the Fairbanks brain for years and the initiative is "New Mexico." Once this is finished the athletic star will turn his attention to the widely publicized "Marco Polo."

Doug himself will be the producer, but he will not play in his own productions, which, of course, will be released through United Artists.

The postponement of "Parnell," which tosses Clark Gable and Joan Crawford into "Love On the Run," means merely that John Stahl isn't quite ready to shoot. The starring team is too important, and expensive, to be left idle. But "Parnell" preparations continue. Reginald O'Shea, son of that Captain Willie O'Shea who features so largely in the scandal, is coming over to act as technical advisor. And the rivalry between John O'Shea and John McFord to sign up Rogues for Parnell, and "The Pooch and the Wench" makes it a great day for the Irish troupers in Hollywood.

Most of Margot Grahame's Puritan holiday has been spent at the bedside of her husband, Francis Lister, well known actor. If Lister is able to travel he will accompany her back to Hollywood early next month. But in any event, Margot is expected at the RKO studio to be the leading light in "Miss Customs Agent," a tale of a customs inspector who tracks down smugglers. This, incidentally, is Cliff Reed's first under-lead grand new contract handed him by Sam Briskin.

The new company is a tax acquired a fable called "The Trade" because he leased but then they say, will not be a Cagney film. No the contract is that Grand Nat'onal is negotiating with other stars and directors.

The management of the Keith Memorial and RKO-Boston Theaters announce several changes in the program for the coming week at these houses.

In pace of the usual Friday opening at the Keith Memorial, the new picture will start on Thursday. "White Fang" made from Jack London's sequel to "Call of the Wild," will replace "And So They Were Married," the picture previously announced for this house. "Easy Money," a screen expose of the accident insurance racket, will be the other attraction.

The new film program at the RKO-Boston will begin on Wednesday, instead of Thursday, as has been usual. "Navy Born," with William Gargan and Claire Dodd, and Hoot Gibson and Margaret Callahan in "The Last Outlaw" will be shown.

HANEY ON BUSINESS

Drouth Experience WILL SHOW FOLLY Of Crop Control

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, July 22—The weekly statistics of business activity showed a little reaction last week, which means that the combined effects of the drouth and approaching end of the current automobile season had begun to be seen a week ago.

The dip was so slight, however, as to be reassuring. Furthermore, belated rains and cool weather warrant hopes that the injury will probably be more localized and there will be no real shortage of feed for animals. The critical period for the corn crop is at hand, with hopes that the yield will merely be moderately reduced.

The whole drouth experience will doubtless bring one benefit in showing up the folly of the Roosevelt policies of crop control and price fixing. It will remind us that, in large part, man has to learn to adjust himself to the forces of nature.

Furthermore, it seems that higher living costs are inevitable. Thus, we individuals will have to adjust our family budgets and shift to lower cost items of food. This will remind us that no central government, by regimental policies, can take care of us and that distributions of government funds can be offset by rising prices.

The steel industry lagged behind seasonal expectations, apparently beginning to feel some slowing up in automobile demand and the effects of the drouth. Very gradually, and considerably later than expected, the production of what will soon be called "old models" has begun to taper off in the motor industry.

Railway car loadings, although showing some of the usual seasonal increase, were not quoted up to normal expectations. Retail trade was "spotty" on account of heat and drouth in some sections, but at that was probably about 15 per cent above a year ago.

Above all, wholesale trade showed signs of approaching activity that augur well for fall business. Retail buyers are planning larger inventories and bigger attendance at wholesale markets is large.

Evidently the direct effects of the drouth upon wholesale prices have been discounted. At least, wheat, flour, lard and cotton markets reacted and brought a decline in the price average.

The outstanding events were the raising of the reserve requirements and the termination of the contract between the Goodyear Tire Company and Sears Roebuck. Neither event, however, is likely to have much practical effect upon the course of business.

Why did the reserve board increase the percentage of deposits that member banks have to keep in reserve banks? The answer is that the policies of the administration have caused such a huge inflation potential that no thoughtful person could consider it without a shudder. But have those policies been altered? Not at all.

In fact, the board assures us that the "easy money policy" will be continued. There is no prospect of any considerable change in government borrowing and spending.

1—Is Harry Carey making his TALKIE "debut" in "The Last Outlaw"?
3—To what actress was Hoot Gibson married? Sally Blane, Jean Harlow, Sally Eilers, Joan Blondell?
4—Claire Dodd complains that she has been typed. Underline the kind of roles which she usually depicts—gangster moll, happily married woman, society girl, professional woman.
5—Did William Gargan play in Harold Lloyd's latest picture?

The screen of the RKO Keith-Boston will be the scene of the most entertaining films to be presented at this famous theater in several months. The attractions are: "The Last Outlaw," a thriller, directed by John Ford, who made the "Informer" the best picture of last year.

The all-star cast for this film includes Margaret Callahan, Hoot Gibson, Harry Carey and Tom Tyler. The co-feature, on this fine bill, beginning today is "Navy Born," with William Gargan and Claire Dodd.

The Boston Evening American has secured the co-operation of the BVD company, and is awarding to the winners of the fascinating Seymour Shoze series the latest Hollywood fashions in swim-suits. All you have to do to win one of these handsome suits (men's and women's) is to answer the questions asked each day. Save your solutions until the end of the week, when they should be mailed, together with the size you desire to: Seymour Shoze, Boston Evening American, Boston. Winners will see their names printed in these columns on Monday.

POWER Output at PEAK

N. E. GAINS 10.6 P. C.

New York, July 22 (AP) — Excessively high temperatures throughout the country last week were mainly responsible for boosting electric power production to the highest levels ever recorded.

The Associated Press index of electric production, 1929-1930 taken as 100, advanced for the week ended July 18 to 115.7 from 113.9 the previous week and 101.3 a year earlier.

| | 1936 | 1935 | 1934 | 1933 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| High | 115.7 | 105.5 | 97.4 | 91.9 |

Actual production, as reported by the Edison Electric Institute amounted to 2,099,712,000 kilowatt hours compared with 2,029,704,000 in the preceding week and 1,807,037,000 in the same week last year. The percentage gain over the previous week was 3.4 per cent and over a year ago 16.2.

In addition to the scorching temperatures over most of the country, which the Institute said averaged 10 per cent over the previous week, emergency water pumping also was an important factor in the continued rise.

All major geographical regions showed advances. Percentage gains follow: New England 10.6, Middle Atlantic 11.2, Central Industrial 21.4, West Central 16.7, Southern States 18.8, Rocky Mountain 17.5 and Pacific Coast 8.9.

U.S. Trade Balance Unfavorable

Washington, July 22 (INS)—The United States had an unfavorable trade balance in June of $7,045,000, with the exports valued at $185,188,000 and general imports aggregating $192,233,000.

Although exports for the month were approximately eight per cent less than the volume for May, the United States shipped abroad in June nine per cent more than it did in the corresponding month of 1935. Imports last month were 23 per cent greater than imports in June, 1935.

For the first six months of this year exports rose 13 per cent and imports 17 per cent over the same period in 1935.

25 Years Ago

New York, July 22 (INS)—Senate approved tariff reciprocity with Canada, 53-27.

STEEL Operations OUTLOOK

SATISFACTION ASSURED

New York, July 22 (AP)—The steel industry is assured of the most satisfactory mid-summer operations in years, the weekly review of "Iron Age" says today.

A strong contra-seasonal demand for nearly all products, coupled with the greater firmness in prices than has been in evidence since the period of the NRA code forms the basis for the optimistic prediction, the trade publication said.

"While the current high rate of production, which this week the 'Iron Age' estimates at 71 per cent, is reducing the heavy backlogs that were partly built up during June," the review said, "the well-sustained July demand is raising high hopes that August output will fall only moderately below that of this month.

"Purchases by automobile manufacturers for 1937 models are counted upon next month to take up some of the slack that will result from completion of orders that were booked prior to the July 1 price advance."

The increase of 2 percentage points in the steel ingot rate this week, the survey stated, is accounted for partly by resumption of production at the Portsmouth, Ohio, works of the Wheeling Steel Corp., which was affected by labor troubles, and the starting up of the National Tube Co. plant at Lorain, Ohio, after a short period for vacations and repairs. Some individual units of the industry are operating at well over 90 per cent, the trade papers said.

Steel scrap at Pittsburgh is 25 cents a ton higher, resulting in a further slight advance in the "Iron Age" composite to $13.25 a ton.

Carloadings To Hold at 1936 Peak

Preliminary indications are that the railroad freight movement last week held around the peak levels for 1936 established in the week ended July 11. This is the highest point, on a seasonal basis, since 1931.

Initial reports for the week ended July 18 point to total revenue freight car loadings of around 725,000 cars, which would compare with 724,324 cars in preceding week, and about 593,000 cars in the like 1935 period.

The gain over 1935 would be about 22 per cent, against 28.1 per cent in preceding week and the peak gain of 37.9 per cent over last year shown in week of July 4.

A total of 725,000 cars would be about in line with the average seasonal performance and would produce a Dow-Jones loadings index figure of 79, against 79.2 in week ended July 11. The official figures will be made public Friday by the Association of American Railroads.

UNEMPLOYMENT

SITUATION

Federal Survey Ends

The Federal Government has just recently completed a survey by occupational groups of 6,000,000 persons on relief rolls.

The chart shows that 25 per cent of the unemployed were formerly engaged in the building industry.

All during the depression the public's attention has been directed to the acute unemployment situation existing in industry and agriculture.

Relatively little has been said about the white collar class. However, the federal survey shows that next to the building industry the professional and clerical group had the highest percentage of unemployed, 23 per cent, or a total of 1,380,000.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, July 22—It was only a coincidence that the newspapers carried one story that a New York Central patron was asking his money back because he was forced to ride from Albany to New York without a seat, and another dispatch that the Association of American Railroads would begin soliciting passengers' personal views on railroad train comfort.

But the two stories indicate new attitudes. First, the public has reached the point where it is unwilling to accept railroad inconveniences without protest. Second, the railroads are genuinely eager to find out what the public wants, and change or improve travel service accordingly.

Alabama Power Suit May Settle Fate of TVA

The suit just filed by the Alabama Power Company in that State against the Cullman County Electric Membership Corporation which seeks to restrain the latter from engaging in the public utility business is a matter which will bear watching. The decision of the United States Supreme Court, handed down Feb. 17 last, in the action brought by a group of preferred stockholders of the Alabama company to restrain the sale of certain of its power lines to the Tennessee Valley Authority did not determine the question as to whether the project of the latter interfered with the rights of the private power companies. In the present action the Alabama Power Company contends that the Tennessee Valley Authority and its agents are engaging in unfair competition, and that its rural electrification work is being interfered with and in many instances stopped by the government project. Some students of utility companies believe that this action may serve to determine the broad question as to whether the utility operations of the Authority are constitutional.

New Railway Car Shifting Problem

Thrifty travelers making long railroad trips are reported to be riding in coaches days, and in Pullman cars only to sleep at night. The coach rate is 2 cents a mile, while the Pullman rate is 3 cents. The number of travelers buying tickets for long trips in both coach and Pullman blocks is large enough to create a substantial problem for the railroad operating men in making up trains, and adding or taking off cars at terminals and railroad centers en route.

Oil Shares Ignore Venezuela Trouble

Leading oil shares were unaffected by labor troubles in the Venezuela oil fields and demands that government concessions to foreign interests be terminated. The principal oil companies operating in Venezuela are the Standard Oil of New Jersey and the Royal Dutch Company. In 1935 the former produced 66,100,000 barrels from its Venezuelan properties and the latter 8,469,447 metric tons. Although Royal Dutch has a plant at San Lorenzo, little refining is done in Venezuela, most of its crude being transported by tanker to the company's refineries in Trinidad, Aruba, Curacao and this country. Standard of New Jersey controls 8,088,800 acres of oil lands in Venezuela, from which it obtains 40 per cent of its annual crude oil requirements. Its operations in that country are conducted by Lago Petroleum and Standard Oil Co., of Venezuela. The Lago subsidiary assets exceed $60,000,000.

K. C. Southern Earnings Gain

Kansas City Southern Railways improved earnings reflect heavier volume of freight traffic, which currently is running between 40 and 45 per cent ahead of last year. For the year to date, cumulative freight is better than 30 per cent above the like 1935 period. That the road has translated larger gross revenues into greater operating net, and eventually into net income, is shown in the carrier's net profit of $113,007, equal to 54 cents on the 4 per cent non-cumulative preferred stock in the first five 1936 months. This contrasts with net loss of $677,738 for the like 1935 period.

Canned Food Price Increase Expected

News from various centers that packers had withdrawn prices on certain canned goods, especially corn and peas, was thought in stock market circles to foreshadow an early mark-up in retail costs of such products. Most of the packing company shares were favorably influenced by this prospect. Trade circles said the step just taken by packers is for the purpose of enabling them to determine the extent of crop destruction due to drouth or other adverse influences. According to a reliable service, the reduction in the total pack of vegetables for the 1936 season will approximate 20 per cent. This would cut the pack to approximately 80,000,000 cases against the record pack of about 100,000,000 cases in 1935.

AUTO FACTORY Sales Decline

Factory sales of automobiles manufactured in the United States in June consisted of 454,487 vehicles of which 376,641 were passenger cars and 77,847 were trucks, Department of Commerce reported.

This compared with 460,565 vehicles in May of which 385,507 were passenger cars and 75,058 were trucks, and 356,340 vehicles in June, 1935, of which 294,182 were passenger cars and 62,158 were trucks.

Chain Belt Co.

Chain Belt Co. declared a dividend of 62½ cents, payable August 15 to stock of record August 1, against 50 cents in previous quarter.

Closed Bank to Pay Depositors

Middletown, Conn., July 22 (INS)—Over 2,100 depositors were assured of getting their money from the closed East Hampton Bank and Trust Company, East Hampton, Conn., today following an order of Superior Court Judge Ernest A. Inglis permitting the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to make payment on deposits of less than $5,000.

The order will be delayed 10 days to give the FDIC time to set up the necessary organization.

About 30 depositors who have more than $5,000 will receive $5,000 and part of the remainder depending upon the amount left after all the small depositors are paid.

JUNE MILK Sales Increase

Daily average sales of fluid milk in June increased 1.4 per cent over May, according to monthly reports from leading markets to the Milk Industry Foundation. June daily average sales totaled 6,462,834 quarts in May and 6,272,652 in April.

Payrolls of reporting milk companies increased 3.4 per cent over the preceding month and employment was up 1½ per cent.

Asset Value

General Capital Corp. reports asset value of the capital stock as of June 30, 1936, amounted to $39.27 per share, against $37.05 per share December 31, 1935.

Wall Street Hears

New York, July 22 (INS)—That Hudson Motor Car (HMT) will show around $1.25 a share for the first six months of the year.

That the $1 common dividend of North American (NA) is considered secure.

That Foster-Wheeler (FWC) will report a smaller loss for the first half than the deficit of 88 cents a share in the 1935 period.

RETAIL Costs VIEWED

SCIENTIFIC SELLING

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

New York, July 22—Frank A. Vanderlip, the financier, once pointed out that prosperity in this country was thwarted by the failure of distribution to rise in efficiency commensurately with production.

Economists have long berated the high cost of distribution and the relative inefficiency.

Accordingly, a great opportunity existed for alert and enterprising merchants to cut down the cost of merchandising.

A golden chance existed to build up retail enterprises which could get fresh merchandise into the hands of consumers at a lower cost for handling.

Accordingly, there has been a vast expansion of so-called scientific retailing.

Better selling resulted in the development of the huge department store and multiple unit or chain stores.

As the chains flourished, they raised problems for their competitors.

Alert, individual merchants wisely banded together in voluntary chains to emulate the economies of mass distribution, mass buying and scientific selling.

On the other hand, less efficient old style competitors, tending to fall by the wayside, sought a remedy in politics.

Around the wasteful slovenly merchants there developed a political movement to hamstring and restrict the chains.

Already the Robinson-Patman Federal Act has been passed, and anti-chain store legislation has been adopted by 20 states.

If only the property rights of owners of the chain systems were involved, this trend would be comparatively unimportant.

But the best conducted chains render an important public service in stretching the buying power of the consumer.

While anti-chain store legislation has flourished, consumers have registered their aproval of chains by patronizing them increasingly.

One large grocery chain averages about two per cent profit on gross sales.

If it were broken up by legislation, the increased costs, resulting from less competent operations by slovenly merchants, would fall heavily on consumer budgets. In other words, the good chains cost consumers nothing, for they give to their customers the overwhelming part of the savings resulting from their improved methods.

However, it is agreed that chains siphon funds out of local communities into the financial center. This is at best a half truth. Most of the gross receipts of the chains are spent on inventory and on local expenditures, such as rent and labor. Only the net profit is taken away.

In many lines, the alert, enterprising and efficient merchant, whether banded together in voluntary chains or acting singlehandedly, is able to compete with the chains, especially through rendering a more individualized service. It would be regrettable to see the chains rise to monopolistic proportions, but they are important as pace setters for all retail merchants. They are still a small minority of the total number of retail outlets.

BUILDING BOOM

Bay State REPORTS BIG Increase

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Massachusetts is enjoying an impressive boom in building, according to the State Department of Labor and Industries for the first six months of the year.

The value of all classes of building work for the half year is reported by the department as 46.9 per cent greater than for the corresponding period in 1935.

This excellent showing completely overshadows a rather unsatisfactory showing for June alone when figures under those of June last year were reported. New residential construction led the other divisions with a gain in value for the six months of 72.47 per cent. Non-residential construction jumped 30.7 per cent and the value of operations concerned with additions, alterations and repairs improved 42.7 per cent.

The bank stocks are the beneficiaries of a totally unexpected ruling by the Treasury exempting them from pension taxes. The Treasury takes the view that national banks are instrumentalities of the government and as such are not subject to the tax provisions of the Social Security Act. While this does not affect trust companies and other banking institutions operating under state charter, it is believed that they, too, will avoid it on the basis they are instrumentalities of the state. Coming at a time when investors are taking a much more cheerful view of the outlook of bank stocks, the ruling will help recreate interest in the over-counter market.

Notebook: Of the Boston bank stocks First National has been in demand on reports of good first half earnings . . . One source says that purely banking operations will result in earnings of $1.50 per share for the period . . . Security operations and recoveries on losses previously charged off should swell this figure . . . We would retain this and other bank shares previously recommended and extend commitments whenever the opportunity is offered . . . Of the out of town banks Chemical Bank of New York is still favored here.

Despite the fact the market is persisting in its efforts to work higher without seeking the benefit of a rest we will continue to stand pat on our position. Broad buying recommendations will not be given in the belief previous purchases have placed readers in a position where they obtain the most from higher prices. Representative rails, utilities, coppers, oils and selected specialties have been recommended and there does not seem to be any reason for sales at this time. Until there is a fundamental change in market conditions we will confine ourselves to individual additions or subtractions.

Ticker Talk: Carrier Corp on the curb is an air conditioning unit to consider if this type of security is missing from individual portfolios . . . And we are firm in our belief it should not be missing . . . Any more than aircraft shares should be absent . . . We have noted General Electric on several occasions and while the stock has moved up quite slowly it is now above the resistance noted here last week . . . And not so far above that additional purchases would be out of order . . . Since Noranda left the big board and depends on a purely Canadian market it has done very well . . . And U. S. holders of the stock have a good international hedge against inflation.

PROFIT Taking Hits MARKET

PRICE TREND IRREGULAR

New York, July 22—The stock market showed signs of faltering today after one of the longest recoveries in the past seven years.

While a number of issues managed to hold their own, or records "new highs" with gains of fractions to a point or more, many of the leeaders felt profit selling pressure following a steady to firm opening. Near the fourth hour, however, trading was quiet.

Business news maintained its favorable balance, but most technicians believed the list needed a "correction" in view of its virtually uninterrupted climb since July 8.

Foreign news was none too promising and a closer look was taken by trading forces at the Spanish upheaval as well as the growing strike movement in France.

Shares of Coca-Cola and Spiegel-May-Stern pushed up around 2 points each and improvement was shown by Canada Dry, Louisville & Nashville, U. S. Swelting, Shell Union, Continental Oil, Chrysler, General Electric, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Hudson Motors and Auburn.

Losing Side

On the losing side were American Telephone, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, North American, Anaconda, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Santa Fe, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, National Distillers, J. I. Case, International Harvester, Deere Westinghouse and du Pont.

Bonds were fairly steady while commodities and foreign currencies gave ground in terms of the dollar.

Goodrich common stock fell back about a point following announcement of the company's new capital set-up plan. Goodyear, U. S. Rubber and Firestone also slipped.

Auburn received some support on a second quarter report disclosing a substantial reduction in net loss from the corresponding period last year. Anaconda Wire & Cable declared a 50-cent dividend against a previous 25-cent quarterly disbursement, but the stock was not particularly responsive.

The recurrent liveliness of Chrysler was still one of the principal topics of conversation in the financial sector. Guesses on first half profits for this company were in the neighborhood of $6 or better. Pleasing returns from the directors' meeting tentatively set for Friday were forecast by some analysts.

Timely Items

Followers of the steels were buoyed by the weekly survey of "Iron Age" which found a strong contra-seasonal demand for nearly all products. Estimating current production at 71 per cent of capacity, the review said the excellent July demand indicated the usual August recession probably would be small.

Much depends upon the automobile makers, it was added. If these come forward with expected material orders for new 1937 models, the belief was expressed that the slack which may result from the completion of contracts booked prior to the July 1 price advance, will be taken up without difficulty.

The French franc was .00¼ of a cent easier at 6.62¼ cents at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions. Sterling was ⅛ of a cent firmer at $5.02⅝.

Comments of Brokers

Improving earnings and an excellent business outlook offer holders of common stocks the prospect of better yields by way of higher dividends, and non-dividend paying stocks may become dividend payers.—Blake Brothers & Co.

The consolidation movement of stocks appears about completed. If that judgment is correct, prices in the general list should jump vigorously forward now, on increased volume of trading.—H. D. Comer-Paine, Webber & Co.

With favorable reports and dividend actions immediately ahead it is probably wise not to stress too much the extent and rapidity of the advance, and the possibility of a technical reaction.—J. S. Wilson-Josephthal & Co.

We would again consider the market as being in a new phase of advance and would resume a policy of making fresh commitments on periods of reaction or hesitation in favorably situated issues.—Berry Grant-Hornblower & Weeks.

While some profit taking setback can be experienced at any time there is no reason for changing bullish policy and such reactions should be regarded as affording buying opportunities.—J. P. Maher-Shields & Co.

FOREIGN Copper Use GAINS

UNITED STATES LAGS

Deliveries of refined copper by North and South American producers to consumers in the United States declined from 1,119,000 short tons in 1929 to 336,000 tons in 1932 and then rose to 580,000 tons in 1935, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

Copper consumption in the United States last year was thus little more than half as large as in 1929 despite three years of expansion. The foreign market for copper showed a much greater improvement.

Deliveries to foreign consumers by North and South American producers rose from 289,000 tons in 1932 to 634,000 tons in 1935, or to a higher figure than in 1929 when foreign deliveries amounted to 587,000 tons.

Whereas in 1929, the United States market for copper was nearly double the foreign market, the foreign market in 1935 was larger than the United States' market.

Expansion

Preliminary figures covering the first six months of 1936 indicate that the expansion of copper consumption in foreign countries may have temporarily come to an end in 1935. Foreign consumption in the first six months was 7.2 per cent smaller than in the same period last year.

This curtailment, however, was more than offset by a continuation of the expansion movement in the United States. Consumption of copper in this country during the first six months was 46.6 per cent larger than in the corresponding period of 1935.

Consequently, world consumption showed an increase of 9.2 per cent over a year ago. While production during the first six months was 7.2 per cent larger than in the same period last year, consumption was in excess of the output and stocks, which have been on the decrease during the past three years, showed a further reduction.

Mass. Retail Sales Gain in June

Retail sales in Massachusetts increased about 11 per cent during June as compared with June, 1935, according to preliminary figures of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Although there was one more working day in June of this year, there were only four Saturdays in the month as compared with five in June, 1935, so that on a daily average basis, the sales of the reporting firms show an increase of about 10 per cent.

All of the trade groups showed gains, the greatest improvement being recorded by the furniture and automative groups with increases of 25 per cent and 21 per cent, respectively. The least gain was reported by the food group with an increase of nearly three per cent.

Old Colony R. R.

Cotton Spindle

Bureau of Census announces that according to preliminary figures 28,311,834 cotton spinning spindles were in place in the U. S. on June 30, of which 22,957,322 were operated at some time during the month. Compared with 22,828,888 for May and 22,703,836 for June, 1935.

HAS NEW DEAL

Benefited OUR WORK Classes?

By B. C. FORBES

Morning after morning I noticed a crowd of young men and women milling around the entrance to an apparently vacant building. I investigated. The explanation was that workers were being taken on, temporarily, to "sort" hundreds of thousands of contest coupons.

The eagerness to be admitted had impressed me. Fears have been widely expressed (by myself, among others) that the wholesale ladling out of doles by the New Deal would discourage strenuous efforts to find work.

This incident set me a'thinking. This writer constantly receives letters from men and women desperately anxious to find employment.. They come from persons of all ages — elderly, middle-aged, young.

We read of farmers and others having difficulty in getting workers in various parts of the country—that many prefer public relief to honest-to-goodness jobs, especially jobs entailing manual labor and offering only modest pay.

My observations and experiences in many lands convince me that there is less voluntary loafing in America than in any other country, that the great majority of Americans are more energetic and more ambitious than the rank and file of other nations.

We are essentially a nation of workers. Even Americans who have accumulated enough money for retirement rarely quit work, whereas in most other countries a few choose to toil after they have acquired a competency.

Let us agree, or at least assume, that Americans would rather earn a living than accept public aid, whether in the form of an outright dole, outright charity, or in the form of "made" work paid for out of the earnings of taxpayers.

How successful has the New Deal been in regard to the working classes?

President Roosevelt has all along proclaimed his determination to champion the underdogs. He and his brain trusters started off confident that they could restore prosperity if they spent enough billions of taxpayers' money to "prime the pump," as they called it.

Well, they have spent more billions more rapidly than any government in all history. Their expenditures average $20,650,000 every day since taking office. They have increased the Federal debt, the debt shouldered by taxpayers, by over $13,000,000,000.

But what has been accomplished? The number of workers unable to find real employment today is far greater than the average unemployed during President Hoover's regime and not only so, but the national breadline is shockingly larger than it ever was under any previous administration.

Were public charity prized by American workers more than opportunity to earn an honest livelihood, President Roosevelt's policies would be heartily endorsed by our working classes.

But if it be true that the average American would rather be self-supporting than a recipient of public relief, how should they regard the policies of the New Deal?

It has been abundantly proved that adequate employment cannot be restored through constant pounding and pummeling and punishment of employment-giving concerns.

It should be manifest to workers and to everybody else that full tide prosperity and employment cannot be achieved unless and until business, industry, finance, investors, can have confidence that the government will act fairly towards all classes.

It should be clearly realized by everyone that America cannot go on indefinitely piling up federal deficits and debts, that unless business and industry and entrepreneurs can feel warranted in investing more capital and creating more jobs, our whole economic structure must ultimately collapse.

What this nation needs above everything else is an administration that will make it possible for the many millions now idle and objects of distasteful charity to enjoy a better deal, better opportunity to become self-supporting and to regain their self-respect, their standing in their communities.

Somerville's Tax Rate

SOMERVLLE'S 1936 tax rate, highest in the city's history, is $41.90, an increase of $3.30 over the 1935 rate.

Real estate owners, justly alarmed, will find little comfort in taking pencil and paper and trying to figure whence the money to pay the tax bill will come.

The man with the home valued at $10,000 must shortly look around for $419 to carry to the Tax Collector's office. If he has $20,000 in a Savings Bank that pays 2 per cent interest, he will have to take to City Hall all that the $20,000 nets him and then seek $19 more.

The less fortunate man with no money in the bank must prepare to work ten and a half weeks at $40 per week for the privilege of living in his home. The even less fortunate man with the $20 job would have to work 21 weeks.

No happier will be the man who rents the $10.-000 home. Immediately the $419 tax bill is passed along to him. With it go insurance costs, maintenance charges and the host of disguised State and Federal levies. AND THE PROBABILITY IS THAT ALL HE EARNS DURING FOUR MONTHS OF THE YEAR WILL GO TO PAY THE RENT BILL.

SOMERVILLE real estate and rent payers, seeing only misery in the situation at home, may find some consolation if they tour the State and listen to the protests in cities and towns where government costs are more burdensome than theirs.

A trip of this kind might include Abington with its $42.60 rate, Ashburnham with $43.80, Belchertown with $46, Bridgewater with $43.60, Cheshire with $46.60, Chesterfield with $47, Hampden with $44, Hinsdale with $51, Leverett with $45, Ludlow with $47, Phillipston with $52.30, Salisbury with $46 and Savoy in the Berkshires with $56.

PITYING the other fellow may cheer the tax-crushed individual for misery does like company. BUT A GENERAL DEMAND BY EVERY TAX-PAYER AND RENT PAYER THAT CITIES AND TOWNS IMMEDIATELY REDUCE OPERATING EXPENSES AND APPLY TO THEMSELVES THE PRINCIPLES OF INTELLIGENT ECONOMY WOULD HAVE A MORE FAVORABLE EFFECT ON THE INDIVIDUAL'S POCKETBOOK.

"Typical Tammany States"

THE most significant event in Philadelphia was the abolition of the Two-Thirds Rule, with only feeble opposition from the once-proud South.

That event may mean the end of the Democratic Party within the next four years. Meanwhile, it means that the thirteen Southern States are UNDER THE FARLEY THUMB.

They will be surprised to learn that they have become "Typical Tammany States," subject to remote control from Haverstraw and Hyde Park, N. Y.

A Lesson for Americans

Sitting uneasily between Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany, both bristling with arms, Austria serves notice she intends to fight if circumstances warrant.

Little Austria, insignificant as to territory, proved BIG two decades ago in the events that preceded the World War. SHE MIGHT PROVE BIG AGAIN.

This picture will interest Americans, especially those who remember the soldier boys of '17 that died and the war debts that also died.

But the real lesson of the picture should be that AMERICA'S INTEREST IS IN AMERICA, THAT OUR MILLIONS SHOULD GO FOR OUR OWN DEFENSE, NOT FOR WARS IN EUROPE.

Use Anti-Rust

By Nelson Harding

Keep bright that cannon, Uncle Sam,
And do not let the weapon rust,
Experience once you cannot
In Pacifism put your trust.

For preservation of defense
Use anti-rust and elbow grease,
Spare neither if you wish to make
That gun a guarantee of peace.

Gems and Superstition

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Modest gems seem to ride along nicely down the centuries without being mixed up with trouble. Big, ostentatious gems, boon of Sunday supplement writers, sooner or later, usually are associated with disaster. Their cabalistic and symbolic glories have imparted bitter anti-climax to human splendors.

Edwin C. Hill

Lillian Russell, one of the glories of an earlier day, burgeoned in the splendor of her beauty and her jewels. It is sad to think that her daughter, in financial straits, physically disabled from an accident, must relinquish her mother's ring of the "flawless emerald" to satisfy a petty debt.

Since the death of Alexander P. Moore, Lillian Russell's husband, the six-carat emerald, surrounded by nine diamonds, has been harried through the courts, as notable jewels so often are. No first night glitter and bravura here, but human contention as hard and insensate as its own cold facets.

There was the Czarina's $1,000,-000 necklace of 725 diamonds, one of the most beautiful pieces of the Russian crown collection. It seemed to have a royal resting place in the home of Mrs. Edith Rookefeller McCormick. But the executors of her estate found it necessary to dismember it and realize what they could.

The story of the evil trailing or attending famous jewels is an outworn tale. Much fantasy and much superstition have been read into stories of gems like the Hope diamond. No sensible person attributes to jewels sinister influence or magical properties. And yet, just as the crude animism of primitive peoples endowed inanimate objects with mysterious powers, so millions of modern men persist in endowing jewels with propensities of good or evil.

SCIENCE BAFFLED

In the long view, they have failed to intrench their owners in power, security, distinction. Their undimmed glories all the more dramatically set off the tottering of human "thrones, powers and dominions." There is here an understandable dramatic antithesis, even if the evidence of the gem's conection with failure and frustration is lacking. But there are gem mysteries which never have been explained.

Scientists have puzzled in vain over the curious red ruby owned by H. W. B. Meeson of the Bengal Legislative Council. It is a beautiful blood red stone and, inside it there is a human figure as perfectly outlined as if it were the work of a competent sculptor. The figure wears a white robe and white "puggree" headdress. Heads of the geological department of India have acknowledged themselves utterly baffled as to how the human likeness got there.

Ralph Shirley, British occultist and writer on such subjects, who has devoted much of his life to exploring strange jewel stories, would doubtless offer an explanation in the realm of the mystic. There are a number of supposedly haunted gems in the British Museum, and Mr. Shirley has built up therefrom a fascinating anthology of spooky tales.

GHOSTLY GUARDIANS

One story that has particularly engrossed him is in the collection of Elizabethan jewels, strange, varied and beautiful, found under an old warehouse by some workmen in 1912. The casket was taken to the house of an official of the British Museum. At the turn of midnight, there was a cold, clammy blast of air through the house, a weird luminous glow, a sudden clattering and banging of doors, all seeming to emanate from the ancient, earth-encrusted jewel casket.

The story of these happenings never was told, but when the jewels were put on public exhibition in the museum, a young woman viewing them, screamed and fainted. She said she had seen an emaciated man, in Elizabethan dress, hovering over the jewels and muttering execrations. Many persons professed to see the same spectre.

These and other such purported incidents Mr. Shirley weaves into his theory that portions of our unworthier selves cling to our earthly possessions, and that jewels really may carry a sinister, repellent aura. Various branches and derivations of theosophical cults in India advance the same belief, chiefly with regard to rubies.

As ancient English houses are sold, there come stories of discovered gem hoards and their unconquering spooks. Somehow we just won't give up the idea that a jinx or a curse goes with a thumping big jewel. But most of us would take a chance on these extras if a jewel, say the Kohinoor, came our way.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, July 22—Outside of the radio and screen, Youth storms most the gates of the big advertising agencies for a career. Not only young men but young women. The agency anterooms are filled daily with saucer-eyed hopefuls who yearn to gallop to glory on an epigram.

O. O. McIntyre

They have heard of the extraordinary fame and salaries of the Bruce Bartons, the Ohio Winters, the Phil Lenzens and Ad Klubers and of course want to trek the golden trail. The truth is ad copy writing has indeed become one of the shortest cuts to big cash money.

A simple five-word slogan may hoist an obscurity to the heights almost over night. There are a dozen top-notchers so yanked from the hall bedroom to the expansive country estate, private airplane and de luxe suites on the Normandie and Queen Mary.

The sudden ad genius does not have to have especial training. Often he has been the dreamer of a prairie town or a shipping clerk in a city basement. He must have the knack of brevity and flair for the slogan. With these he may often sign on the dotted line at his own figure.

Success story: Anthony Restaino is a barber from Italy, 33 years old, who arrived here 15 years ago, penniless and with only a few words of English. Today he owns the 12-chair Anthony's Sartorial Studio fringing Herald Square.

Also he's a third partner in a successful dressmaking establishment and the other day he took over another large barbershop.

Too, he owns a two-family apartment house in Astoria, L. I. An immigrant boy, 18 years of hard work, clean living and there is the old Horatio Alger formula in real life.

Still another: His name is Ludwig and he may be seen perched in his wheel chair selling papers at 34th and Broadway. Bankers, shoppers, merchants, clerks and light ladies of the vicinity are charmed by his friendly smile.

Ludwig is a victim of infantile paralysis and since one year old has not used his legs. Yet is known for his cheerfulness. He knows everybody by sight, for he is always there to watch them go by in sunshine, storm, icy cold and snow.

And Ludwig, whose legs, he says, are like silk, goes to the movies on crutches without his feet touching the ground, as if on stilts. It's good to talk to Ludwig. He makes so many of us whiners feel cheap and unworthy.

After ten barehead years, Earl Carroll has begun wearing a hat again. He was the first recruit in an army that gave the hat manufacturers Frank Van Hoven's "headache built for a horse." Danbury once thought of burning him in effigy. Costing them many thousands.

In the beginning Carroll adopted the custom as a panacea for baldness. But his top locks continued to thin. His one big gain by the experiment has been financial. He figures he has in 12 years saved at least $1500 in tips.

The story goes that the Jimmy Walkers, who pined so for New York during their London exile, found it not so pleasant upon return. Hence their sail back to Great Britain so quickly for a stay that might be indefinite. The Walkers' spirits began to droop after the first huzzah over their arrival. They tried to acquire a new interest by adopting a baby. But somehow things were not the same as when Jimmy swashbuckled high, wide and handsomely—with New York at his heels and responding to his every whim. The bantam cock of the walk!

That's That

The hypocrisy of some of our alleged statesmen is appalling. In many sections of the country Democratic leaders, some of them holding high offices, are lauding the New Deal publicly and deploring it privately. They are urging their constituents to re-elect President Roosevelt, but they are confessing to their intimate friends that his administration has been a terrible mess. The spectacle of party leaders afraid to speak their minds about the Roosevelt regime is sickening.

Party loyalty is all right in its proper place. But it should not be used as a gag to prevent representatives of the people from telling the people the truth and the whole truth. There are many Congressmen and Senators who think their political fortunes are tied up with those of President Roosevelt. They figure it is more expedient to be loyal to him than to the people they are supposed to represent. They seem to forget they are the servants of the people, rather than of the President.

---

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia is not in the jelly fish class. Speaking with the frankness and independence expected of one with his reputation for courage and devotion to the public, he says "We have a government of privilege and discrimination."

---

Without gloves, Senator Glass took up one phase of New Deal foolishness which officeholders and candidates of the demagogic type wouldn't touch with a ten-foot pole. "I submit," he said, "that THERE IS NO MORE DAMAGING SPECIES OF TYRANNY THAN THAT OF TAXING THE MANY FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE FEW. The easiest thing in the world is to spend somebody else's money."

---

This last Congress certainly found somebody else's money not only easy but entertaining. In two sessions it appropriated nearly 20 BILLION dollars. It was the "appropriatingest" Congress ever known. And it was President Roosevelt's Congress. He controlled it as absolutely as any ventriloquist ever controlled his dummies.

---

Twenty billion dollars is such a stupendous sum that it is beyond the comprehension of any ordinary person. It is only by comparison, that one can have any idea how much it is. The total value of all the farms in this country, including their houses, barns, machinery and live stock, is only about 32 billions. The amount of money Congress, in the last two years, has authorized to be spent is more than half the value of all the farms and their equipment in this nation.

---

Senator Glass says President Roosevelt "made the mistake of taking all the power that Congress was willing to give him" and "it is Congress that should be blamed for abjectly surrendering its own constitutional functions and delegating them to the President and to various minor executive officials." The President and Congress are equally guilty. He is to blame for making a rubber stamp of Congress. And Congress should be censured for submitting to his dictation.

---

In sharp contrast to Senator Glass' denunciation of New Deal tyranny and surrendering of power is the opinion expressed by former Comptroller General McCarl of Governor Landon, the Republican presidential nominee. After a two-hour visit with the Kansas Executive, McCarl predicted that if Governor Landon is elected President "he will neither become a dictator nor view the plight of our own people from such isolated and lofty eminence as to be tempted toward fantastic experiments." He found Landon "SANELY PROGRESSIVE, intent upon moving forward on a safe and sound basis—evolution, not revolution."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

Broken and bloodstained, there it lay on the fanged slopes of Chesinut ridge—the giant silver-liner Sun Racer.

Flying blindly through impenetrable fog, its brave pilot—through no fault of his own—missed the beam which would have led him to a safe landing. And so, crashed to his death.

An amazing achievement, that ray of light which guides the airman to his landing field! A radiant beam, rising triumphantly through the night, piercing the murk of storm and darkness—leading the flier to his haven. A master achievement of the Machine Age!

Yet, long before the Machine Age was ushered in, human life knew and followed a beam that pierced a darkness blacker than any night . . . that triumphed over storms fiercer than airmen ever faced. And, following that beam, found safety.

Before ever men knew the meaning of electricity . . . when they creaked their way laboriously in ox carts not dreaming of airplanes . . . when they cowered over the sooty flame of a cave fire before history had been even started . . . the human followed a beam.

A beam that had no substance—that could not be seen by mortal eye—yet was the most powerful influence in man's life—THE BEAM OF THE SPIRIT.

And some called it "conscience." And some called it "the voice of God." And some had no name for it. But always it has been there since the first dim dawning of our consciousness. And always that "radiant ray" has pierced through our cruelty and greed, has triumphed over our ignorance and hate, has led us home to safety if we would follow its light.

How does one know that Beam? How does one follow its guidance? By listening to that impulse toward honesty and courage, kindness and fair play which moves through even the most darkened spirit. By turning again to the simplicity of childhood, and trusting that instinct which urges us to be decent and brave. For no matter how complicated and confused life may become, this is the real issue—the safe and enduring guide—this Beam of the Spirit that beckons to us across our man-made night.

There are other lights for the flier than the radio beam—dazzling, dangerous lights which mislead him; send him crashing to ruin. And there are other lights for the soul—false gleams that lead us all astray; vicious will-o'-the-wisps lit by ambition, love of pleasure, lust for power and wealth. These watch lights flare and beckon, but never do they lead to safety or to peace.

ONLY GOD'S BEAM LEADS TRUE!

America Faces Bankruptcy

By H. PARKER WILLIS

Former Secretary of the Federal Reserve Board.

ARTICLE III

It would be unhappy enough if the Government were merely eviscerating the banks' properties by taking their assets largely against their best judgment and disposition.

But, what is worse, preparations are now being made to undermine the entire credit and capital system of the country.

When a bank purchases United States bonds from the Treasury, it merely credits the Government with the value of the securities; in other words, it establishes a deposit account for its purchasing price.

Then the Government draws checks upon the sum so created, either directly against the bank, or against the Reserve Bank of the District after the balance has been transferred.

Thus, the apparent means of payment in the community are steadily enlarged in the form of "deposits."

The effect is much the same as if the Government issued a similar volume of greenbacks or legal tender notes, and put them into national circulation.

In short, this is FIAT CREDIT —credit which is supported by NO NEW OR CURRENT VALUES.

It rests entirely upon the capacity of the Government to pay its debts at some future date, WHICH MAY NEVER ARRIVE.

How far can this situation progress in America before an open break occurs?

But after that—the deluge.

Unless our program is sharply changed, the collapse will come —A CONFESSION OF THE INSANITY OF THE WHOLE NEW DEAL CREDIT SYSTEM.

Dictators invariably—whether in Italy, Germany, Russia, or Mexico—have first of all gone to the banks for the money they needed; that is to say, to the depositors of the banks.

They have operated upon the simple assumption that it was better and safer for them to sack the banks than to get what they needed by public taxation.

If the Government needs funds, it should procure them directly from the people by the obvious and honest method of public borrowing, or through taxation.

But as things now look, the New Deal politicians, firmly entrenched as they are at the national trough, plainly have no intention whatever of giving up their places and permitting the banks to occupy a legitimate position in public financing.

On the contrary, they evidently have every intention of following the program pursued by Lenin and the Bolsheviks in Russia—that of getting money from the banks IN ORDER TO DESTROY THEIR BUSINESS AND THAT OF THEIR STOCKHOLDERS.

The Russian Soviet leaders knowingly and deliberately sought to destroy the currency and to bring on a collapse of the entire structure of finance and industry.

A survey of the policies of the last three years in the United States indicates a close parallel between Russian and American technique, which implies a similarity of philosophy.

The chaotic results which followed in Russia (and which led even there to an inevitable reconstitution of banking) SEEM TO BE THREATENING HERE.

How long will the average American be willing to the continuance of the present New Deal credit and fiscal policy?

This is impossible to predict.

What is certain is that genuine inflation of credit, with the inevitable unsoundness and peril of ultimate collapse, is fast getting beyond the control either of the Government, the banks, or the people.

That the citizen will pay in the end for this whole costly and purposeless business is as certain as anything in this world can be.
